Gossip From the Capital.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 17.—The Apportionment bill, on calm consideration, gives pretty general satisfaction. Neither party makes any great gain. The Senate will probably pass the bill.

Ex-Minister Christiancy says the story about the race for life at Lima is all a hoax. He was not with the British Minister, and his talk of running through swamps is absurd, as there are none near Lima. The talk of mountains near Chicago would be quite as reasonable.

A machine is exhibited in the Post Office department by which one man stamps 24,000 letters per hour.

The Post says Mrs. Scoville's letter is only excusable on the theory of aberration of mind. The writer's relatives should see she has no other opportunity to force herself upon one whose every burden should be lightened.

The Senate Polygamy bill is like to go through the House with little modification.

Some doubts are expressed about the ability of New to perform the duties as Secretary of the Treasury. It has the making of appointments, and New is too good natured to refuse anybody.

Indian Courts.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 16.—In connection with the bill to establish a United States Court in the Indian Territory, now pending before the Senate committee, that the Indians of that territory regard this measure with suspicion; that they suspect it of being a scheme tending to the opening of their country to settlement and to deprive them eventually of their lands. To remove this fear and at the same time afford protection to life and property in that territory, the chairman of the committee today proposed to the representatives of the Indians that they assent to an extension of the United States criminal laws only over their territory. This proposition was received with apparent favor, and it is probably a substitute for a pending bill. It will be framed, providing punishment for criminal offenses in the Indian Territory, but leaving all the civil questions to be settled as now arranged among the Indians.

Vast numbers of petitions, all upon blanks with printed headings prepared for that purpose, are being received by both houses of Congress, praying for legislation to regulate interstate commerce and prevent extortions and discriminations by common carriers. The first paragraph of the petition is as follows: "That the railways of our country are public highways built for the public benefit and all the people have equal, just and reasonable terms without extortion and without discrimination."

EDUCATION OF THE MASSES.

Miller, of N. Y., presented to the Senate to-day a memorial from the Union league club, of N. Y., signed by ex-Secretary Evarts as President, in favor of the passage of Senator Blaine's bill to appropriate fifteen millions for public education. The memorial calls attention to illiteracy in the country shown to exist by the last census, and urges that it is the duty of the general government to assist in removing this blot from the nation by providing means for the education of the masses.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

The Senate went into executive session at half past one on motion of Senator Logan, who said he was indisposed and wanted to get home. He said he wanted to be present at the executive session, and would therefore ask it to be earlier than usual. Senator Logan, who is chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, and has charge of the Rochester case, reported favorably the nomination to be Paymaster-General. It is believed that this case will be disposed of this afternoon.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Edward Ferguson, pension agent at Milwaukee, was confirmed this afternoon.

Confirmations made this afternoon:—S. S. Matthews, U. S. Marshal, Eastern District of Michigan; Hugh J. Campbell, U. S. Attorney for Dakota; Marsden C. Burch, U S. Attorney Western District of Michigan; Leonard Lattredge, Collector of Revenue, Sixth District of Wisconsin.

Committees.

WASHINGTON, February 17.—The Postal Savings Bank will be reported favorably to the House. The Senate Committee in Territories he d a delegation from the Five Nations in Indian Territory in opposition to Yest's bill for the establishment of a U. S. court in the Territory. The committee invited them to place their suggestions in the form of a bill.

THE PORTER CASE.

The Cabinet to-day considered Fitzjohn Porter's case. It is stated the only legal method of redress is for the President to pardon Porter, thus removing his disqualifications from holding office and then restore him to the army by nomination to the Senate.

CONFIRMED.

The Senate confirmed United States Consuls Wm. P. Rice, Massachusetts; Horgen, Switzerland; Charles P. Barnard, Vermont, Leghorn; Thomas Simpson, Puerto Plata at Puerto Plata. United States Marshalls: Jno. M. McClintock, district of Maryland; S. S. Matthews, eastern district of Michigan; Joseph L. Morphis, northern district of Mississippi.

Trade Dollars.

WASHINGTON, February 17.—The House Banking and Currency Committee to-day decided to report favorably the substitute for the two trade dollar bills which provides for the redemption of the trade with the standard; the redeemed trade dollars to be regarded as bullion and go in on the monthly report. The amount subject to an exchange will be $9,000,000.

JENNINGS' BILL.

Jennings, of Boston, filed with the Garfield Auditing Committee a bill for $5,000 for the construction of a cool air apparatus in the Executive Mansion during the illness of President Garfield.

XLVII. CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, February 17.—After considering several bills on the calendar without action, the Senate agreed to adjourn over until Monday. Then ordered. Executive session.

House.

WASHINGTON, February 17.—Mr. Springer moved to reconsider the vote by which Colerick's amendment to the apportionment bill was rejected yesterday. The amendment provides the Governor of any state may call a special election when the Legislature fails to redistrict the state before the election for Representatives. The House tabled the resolution by 113 to 114. Yeas and nays were then ordered on Colerick's substitute, fixing the number of Representatives at 316. Rejected. Yeas 154, nays 94.

Mrs. Scoville's Letter.

CHICAGO, February 17.—Mrs. Scoville was interviewed to-night by a reporter of the city papers. She refused to state whether the letter published this morning was written by her or not. The lady's companion, however, said such a letter had been written by Mrs. Scoville. The report comes from Cleveland stating Mrs. Garfield has not received the letter from Mrs. Scoville praying for the forgiveness of Guiteau.

DELIVERED.

CLEVELAND, O., February 17.—Mrs. Scoville's letter praying for forgiveness for her brother Guiteau, was delivered this morning to Mrs. Garfield.

MRS. GARFIELD'S REPLY.

Guiteau Must Answer to God and the American People.

CLEVELAND, February 17.—J. H. Rhodes, Secretary of the Garfield Monumental Committee, and a near friend of Mrs. Garfield, was interviewed by the Associated Press correspondent to-day. He said Mrs. Garfield had received a letter from Mrs. Scoville this morning, and that he was authorized, in her behalf, to say that toward the slayer of her husband she cherishes no malice. He must answer only to his God and the American people. For the sister and all members of her family she feels only profound pity. Further than this she asks to be left alone with her sorrow and to be spared being dragged into useless and torturing publicity. Mrs. Garfield will not answer the letter.

BULLS AND BEARS.

Wall Street Reports—Pools and Combinations—Hannibal and St. Joe.

NEW YORK, February 17.—One of the city banks sent $500,000 in gold to the interior yesterday. Parties who sold Tennessee bonds at top are said to be regaining their holdings. Fresh reports of consolidation, affecting the Wabash and roads in the Southwest, are in circulation. Paris advices last evening were more favorable. A prominent Wall street firm, which sold a block of St. Paul yesterday, was somewhat surprised to find that the whole amount had been taken by Sage. Carver is credited with dropping Hannibal and St. Joe preferred to 20. A rumor was circulated to the effect that the action of the State of Missouri would cause a suspension of dividends on preferred stock, and would break up the Hannibal and St. Joe pool. Friends of the Company say the differences between the Company and the State will be amicably adjusted, and that there is no truth in the rumors of "trouble in pool." Alley & Dowd bought quite a proportion of the stock sold yesterday. Vanderbilt denies the report that he had purchased the McIntyre interest in the Canada Pacific.

Three People Killed on Account of a Landslide.

SAN FRANCISCO, February 17.—Last Sunday a landslide occurred at Coffey's Cave on the Russian River, carrying the house of Charles L. Johnson into the river. The occupants, Mrs. Johnson, infant, and a white man employed as cook were all killed.

Failures During the Week.

NEW YORK, February 17.—R. G. Dun & Co., of the mercantile agency, report 154 failures for the week, a somewhat greater number than last week, the increase being of speculative failures in grain and cotton, principally in New Orleans and Chicago. In New York the principal failure was C. F. Hardy & Co., shipping and commission merchants, which is enveloped in mystery. It is not known what they owe or what their assets will be. Hardy has not put in an appearance since the failure. The debts are mostly abroad. The distribution of failures in Eastern states is 15, Western 50, Southern 45, Middle 21, Pacific coast and territories 13, New York City 10.

TERRIBLE EXPLOSION.

Nearly Twenty Persons Hurled Into Eternity.

Twenty More Dangerously and Fatally Injured, While Fifty are Seriously Hurt.

CHESTER, PA., February 17.—About eight o'clock this morning an explosion occurred at the Pyrotechnic Works of Professor Jackson, in this city. The building was badly shattered, took fire and was consumed. At least fifteen and probably more lives were lost, and many dangerously wounded. The building is the old Homestead of Admiral Porter. A number of colored families lived in the old Porter mansion. It seems it first took fire and while the firemen were playing on the flames, and a large crowd surrounded them, the explosion occurred,

SCATTERING DESTRUCTION FAR AND WIDE.

The number killed is between fifteen and twenty; about twenty dangerously and fifty more or less seriously wounded. The dead are being laid in the City Hall, and the wounded cared for in the various drug stores, so no accurate list can be obtained now.

The following is a list of the killed and wounded:

KILLED.

John Lamptugh, Thomas Dollison, Thomas Anderson, Alexander Phillips, John Pollick, Jos. Kestner, George Taylor, James Doughty, Benjamin Gartside, Perry Williams (col'd), Anthony Berbar, William Wood (fireman), John Daiers and Edward Stropschire. All the killed lived here.

Fifty are more or less

WOUNDED,

three fatally. Part of the mansion has been used by Prof. Jackson, pyrotechnist, for some years as a place of manufacturing explosive commodities. The firemen, after being assured that there was no explosives in the place, went to work. After playing on the flames for about half an hour a terrific explosion occurred. The bodies of the men were thrown in every direction, and the air was filled with flying debris. The ground was covered with victims. Some were killed, some seriously injured, and others badly hurt. The dead bodies of the men lay coiled on the ground; others labored in the

AGONIES OF DEATH.

A number writhed in their blood, moaned and groaned piteously for help. Many lay insensible to their surroundings, and others bruised and bleeding groped their way from the scene of the terrible accident.

The scene beggars description.

PEOPLE PRAYED IN THE OPEN STREETS,

and the shrieks of the dying were appalling. The fire was abandoned, and everybody in a condition to do so turned their attention to alleviating the distress. The houses in the vicinity of the explosion were converted into hospitals, and the wounded removed thereto.

The penalty for each road is $5,000.

A HALF A MILLION

Suit Against a Railway Company by an Express Company.

MILWAUKEE, February 16.—In the Circuit Court the Northern Transit company has begun a suit against the Grand Trunk railway for damages placed at $500,000, based upon breaches of contract. In 1879 the Grand Trunk contracted with the Transportation company to form its eastern connection, and it is alleged by the latter that the railway did not fulfill its contract by furnishing the requisite number of cars.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

The Governor of Kieff Refuses to Protect the Jews.

Gladstone on Local Government—The Insurrection in Bosnia—Flashes From Afar

England.

LONDON, February 17.—In explaining in the Commons his recent utterances in regard to Home Rule, Gladstone said he held, on the question of local govenment, very clear and distinct opinions, though it was unlikely he would ever be called to take action upon them. He considered the decentralization of Parliament should be the cardinal rule of policy; that local institutions are the source of great strength and the only limit to which the principle is necessary to them is adequate provision for the supremacy of central authority. He believed a wise and just way of meeting the demand for bringing Irish affairs more under Irish control is not to regard it as the first step towards separation, but rather to ask the promoters of the change to formulate the guarantees they proposed to give for the supremacy of Parliament. He had never yet received an adequate and satisfactory explanation on this point.

COLLIERY EXPLOSION.

LONDON, February 17.—Forty bodies were recovered from the colliery at Trimdon Grange, Durham, where an explosion occurred yesterday. It is feared the forty men still remaining in the pit are dead.

Russia.

Mexico.

GUADALAJARA, MEX., February 17.—Senors Marelo and Sevarito, rival editors, fought a duel here yesterday with pistols. Both fired and fell dead simultaneously.

DUBLIN, February 17.—John O'Connor Power, member of Parliament, writes that Gladstone's declaration justifies the opinion that this is the time for pressing the question of Home Rule.

UTAH GENTILES.

They Endorse the Congressional Bill Against Polygamy.

SALT LAKE, UTAH, February 16.—At a meeting of the prominent Gentiles of Utah to-night, the following preambie and resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, the Legislature of Utah, now in session in this city to-day, adopted a concurrent resolution protesting against the passage by Congress of any bills in disfranchising polygamists, but instead thereof praying Congress to send a committee to investigate the condition of things in Utah,

Resolved, That said action is merely a polygamous bluff—a trick to gain time; that if it wins, these very men will claim it as a divine interposition in favor of polygamy, and use it to excite the masses of the Mormon people against the just authority of the national government; that the fact that three-fourths of this Legislature are themselves practical polygamists exposes the condition of things in Utah without the intervention of an investigating committee; that their action in this case betrays their fear that the disfranchising of polygamists will break up polygamy, and thefore indicates precisely what Congress ought to do; that we most respectfully urge Congress not to be deterred from perfecting the good work in which it is engaged by the protests of men who are acknowledged polygamists themselves and who adopt this deferential attitude only because their ordinary attitude of defiance will not, apparently, serve them in a vital emergency; that there need be no fear of convulsion or disturbance if Congress now adopts effective measures to settle the Utah affairs; but if it does not the simplest duties of statesmanship will have been disregarded, as they have too long been, and the chance of peacefully settling Utah affairs will by thus much have been placed in jeopardy.

PRIEST NOR PREACHER.

Allison, the Parricide, Refused to see Either.

The Murderer of His Father Met His Fate on the Scaffold Coolly.

He Would Not Recognize His Mother and Sisters—Hanging in Pennsylvania.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

INDIANA, Pa., February 17.—James G. Allison, the parricide, was hanged here today for the murder of his father on January 18, 1880. He refused spiritual consolation to the last, refused the services of priest and preacher. He witnessed from the jail window the erection of the scaffold yesterday. He ate a light supper and retired at 9 o'clock and slept till after 12. He arose, sat by the fire till after 2, retired again and slept until 6, when he arose, ate a hearty breakfast and with the watchers while awaiting death. He refused to the last to have his hair cut or put on the new suit provided by the sheriff. His mother, two brothers and three sisters live near the town, but none called to see him. Shortly after noon he was conveyed to the gallows in the jail yard. He boldly met his fate and made no confession. The drop was nearly six feet. He was pronounced dead in twelve minutes. The town was crowded with people, but none were admitted except about a hundred on tickets.

COOLLY CONVERSED

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

PITTSBURG, Pa., February 16.—A Chamois special from Indiana, Pa., says James G. Allison, convicted of murdering his father, suffered the penalty of death by hanging this morning at 11 o'clock. The prisoner arose at 6 this morning, having slept four hours. He ate a hearty breakfast but preserved a stolid silence. At 10 o'clock his mother, sister and brother called, but he positively refused to see them and when they came into the cell he would not recognize them.

HE ALSO REFUSED

to be shaved and would not allow the sheriff to dress him in a new suit. At 11 o'clock the trap was sprung and the prisoner launched into eternity. The only words he spoke were, "I have been fetched here wrong." The body was allowed to hang until 11:30, when it was cut down and life pronounced extinct. No excitement prevailed. No one witnessed the execution excepting the officers of the law and newspaper men.

THE CRIME.

James G. Allison was convicted last March in the Indiana county court of the murder of his father. On the 18th day of June, 1881, Robert G. Allison, the murdered man, and his son got into a quarrel about the ownership of a load of brick, which the former intended to take to the county seat next day for sale. That same evening about twilight a young nephew came to the house and told his uncle Robert that Alonzo, another son, wished to speak with him at the road. Going to the place designated he heard a whistle, and calling out to know if it was Alonzo, was answered in vile and abusive terms by James, who added, "I will show you who it is."

The old man retreated toward the house, followed by his irate son, who, when he had approached within a short distance, having a revolver in his hand, fired, the bullet taking effect in the back of his father's head. This was followed by three successive shots, one otriking the old man in the left side, another near the spine and the third in the right side of the back, going through the body and coming out below the left breast. Another son, Alexander, came up just in time so witness the awful tragedy and the father survivid long enough to make an ante-mortem statement chiefly upon which the parricide was convicted. Deceased was about sixty years of age. The son was about twenty-eight years of age, was unmarried, and up to the time of the murder resided with his mother, who, on account of supposed domestic troubles, lived separate from her husband.

THE HUNTER HOMICIDE.

Postmaster Wright Acquitted of all Blame for the Shooting.

The circumstances attendant upon the shooting of Robert Hunter, the negro who made an attempt to kill Postmaster Fred. M. Wright, at Fern Ridge, St. Louis county, last Sunday, and which we published in last Monday's POST-DISPATCH, were made a subject of investigation before Justice William W. Ravens, at Lake Post Office, which is near the scene of the late tragedy, on yesterday. Mr. Warfield, Prosecuting Attorney of St. Louis county, appeared on the part of the State, and the defendant was represented by Mr. T. H. Peabody, of this city.

A very large number of witnesses were examined. Their testimony corroborated the statements made by the POST-DISPATCH reporter concerning the dangerous character of Robert Hunter, the negro who was killed, and fully exonerated Mr. Wright. The testimony further went to show that at the time of the shooting Hunter was armed with a revolver, and that he had only a few moments previous to his encounter with Mr. Wright threatened the life of a colored farmer, named Charles Wells, who lived in the same part of the county.

After leaving Wells, Hunter made for Wright's store with his loaded and cocked pistol openly displayed. Entering the doorway, the first motion he made was an aggressive one towards Mr. Wright, who was standing inoffensively and unarmed behind his counter attending to his business. Had Hunter shot at once he might easily have killed Wright, but he felt so sure of his victim that he delayed firing, though all the time keeping up a succession of violent gestures and abusive language, until the Postmaster had had time to get his own revolver from the drawer where it was kept and at the decisive moment, when the encounter was practically a duel between them, Wright managed to fire just a second in advance of Hunter, his bullet entering the negro's breast in the manner described by the reporter, and resulted in Hunter's death in the road a few minutes afterwards. It was brought out in the evidence that Hunter had on numerous occasions been a participant in desperate affrays. His character was that of a reckless and wicked man, and his neighbors made a habit of avoiding him whenever it was possible. Two years ago Hunter was cut in the neck by a colored man whom he had wantonly assaulted, receiving a very severe gash, and once before that he had been shot by another negro in a brawl which Hunter had instigated. General satisfaction is felt in St. Louis county that Hunter will no longer disturb the community.

The investigation, which commenced at 10 o'clock in the morning, was not concluded until 8 in the evening, and resulted in the honorable discharge of Mr. Wright.

WANTED, AN ELEVATOR.

The City Hall Employes Clamoring For Better Accommodations.

The removal of the Board of Public Improvements to the third story of the City Hall building will doubtless soon be followed by the removal to the same part of the building of other offices. The Board of Public Improvements have been meeting since the organization of the Board in the office of the Water Commissioner, but have been very much cramped for room. The Water Commissioner himself has for a long time felt that his own department quarters were too limited, and has cast about for some time for ways to increase their capacity. The Street Commissioner, as is well known, will spread out into the rooms about to be vacated by Col. Flad. The Commissioner of Supplies needs more room, as do several other important municipal departments. The third floor of the building affords ample space for the accommodation of a score of officers, and the sole reason why this part of the building has never been utilized for business purposes has been the inconvenience of reaching it. Probably in no large building in the city are the staircases so steep and high as they are in the City Hall. The third story of that building is as high as the fourth in most business edifices. It takes away the breath of the average person to climb to even the second floor of the building, and the labor of steadily keeping on one's way to the third floor is really a serious one. To repeat the performance a number of times daily, as the gentlemen connected with Col. Flad's office will be required to do after next week, largely augments their responsibilities. The gravity of the situation has been so apparent that several of the clerks in the building held a secret mass-meeting at one of the hotels one evening this week and thoroughly discussed the matter. The result was the appointment of a committee of three, to whom was assigned the duty of waiting upon the Mayor and the members of the Assembly to represent their grievances and to solicit relief. Among others, the committee called upon a prominent Democratic member of the House of Delegates. This gentleman, as soon as the case was presented to him, at once solved the difficulty by suggesting that an elevator was the thing that was wanted; and an elevator it is to be. "An ordinance to authorize the construction of an elevator in the City Hall," is the title of a bill which will be introduced by the member referred to in his own branch of the Assembly to-night. The location selected by the committee as the one most eligible is the space now occupied by the stairway in the Chestnut street side. The first landing will of course be on the second floor, and will be most convenient for reaching the offices of the House of Delegates, the Mayor, Comptroller, Auditor, Treasurer, Council, Street Commissioner and the other officers situated on that floor. The elevator will also carry passengers to the third floor, which is expected to be peopled by departments which are looking for new and larger quarters, as soon as the elevator is ready. The cost of the elevator will not exceed $2,500, and this sum it is provided in the ordinance is to be transferred from the appropriation of $10,000, which was made last winter for heating the City Hall by steam, but which remains intact in the Treasury.

FIGHTING FOR TIME.

Charles Green's Attorneys Trying to Postpone the Inevitable.

This morning was set by Judge Boyle as the time for the Green directory of the Fair Association to come into court with an answer to the petition of the gentlemen on the Ferguson Citizens' ticket, which, it is claimed, carried the recent election. At the motion hour Judge Geo. A. Madill, of counsel for the defendants, B. R. Davenport and F. N. Judson for the contesting petitioners, and Charles L. Hunt, were the prominent figures in front of the bench, and it seemed that another stage of a litigation involving a controversy of the greatest importance to the business interests of St. Louis was about to be reached. The tactics of the defense thus far have been marked by technical opposition and obstructive delay and this morning there was no change in that programme. Judge Madill, addressing the Court said;

"In this matter of Ferguson and others against Pendleton and others, may it please the court our answer is being copied and will be ready later in the day. Counsel on the other side wish to look at it and it will be furnished them that for purpose. We can come in again to-morrow and then arrange for a hearing of the issues involved."

The court motioned an assent to the arrangement and the answer will be filed this afternoon.

A Curt Testament.

The will of James C. Campbell, bearing date June 26th, 1879, was admitted to probate to-day. The widow receives all the household effects and $1,400. The testator then goes on to say: "I give and bequeath to my daughter Permelia Arabella, or as she now styles herself, Belle Kimball, fourteen hundred dollars." The daughter Virginia and Adora receive $1,400 each, and the son James $400, he having already received $1,000. The testator next says: "To my son Sylvester I make no bequest, as I gave him several years ago $1,400, and have receipt in full satisfaction for his share in my estate, and apart from this he is now indebted to me for money received and rents collected on my account, which he has never paid over, in the sum of $935 after giving credit for $25, which he sent me recently." The residue of the estate is to be invested for the widow's use, and at her death it is to be divided equally among the children. The widow, son James and son-in-law Thos. D. Kimball are appointed executors.

BELLEVILLE.

The usual Sunday services at the M. E. Church will be omitted on Sunday in favor of a service of song and responsive reading by the congregation.

Belleville has been selected as the place to hold the meeting of the District Farmers' Institute which is soon to take place. The information was conveyed in a letter from Hon. David Gore, of Macoupin, to County Treasurer Stookey.

The question of annexing the village of West Belleville to Belleville proper is now being agitated by residents of both places. The scheme was attempted before, but owing to strenuous efforts on the part of residents of West Belleville, was defeated. The parties who contributed to the failure before are now most anxious for its success, and are circulating a petition, which, when a sufficient list of names has been secured, will be presented to the Board of Trustees, asking them to provide a union ordinance to be submitted to a popular vote of the citizens.

DEFENDING THE PAGAN.

Bob Ingersoll's Brother Goes for the Rev. Mr. Talmage.

From the Chicago Times.

A brother of Bob Ingersoll, residing near Waukesha, Wisconsin, has written the following letter to Parson Talmage:

SIR—I have before me a copy of the Cincinnati Enquirer containing the report of a sermon delivered by you on the 5th inst., upon the "Meanness of Infidelity." In the course of your remarks you say you had just received a letter from some one, informing you that the Rev. John Ingersoll, father of R. G. Ingersoll and myself, "was abstemious to a fault, and the family suffered accordingly. The children were commanded to eat, drink and dress sparingly. He never spoke a kind word of his wife, who was a noble Christian woman, nor of his children, within the knowledge of persons now living here, who were familiar with the family. At last the mother died. She was cared for by friends in her sickness, and on the day of her interment gentle hands carried her form, and rested it for a time on the catafalque. Mr. Ingersoll, to the astonishment of all present, deliberately removed his cravat and gloves, stepped on the rostrum, and delivered a eulogy over the body. He attempted to extol her virtues and panegyrize her conduct. It was the first time he had ever been known to speak well of her in public."

Now, reverend sir, will you be kind enough to tell your informant for me that he or she is a malignantly cruel, heartless and infamous liar? Our father was poor; I will not deny it. In the days of my childhood a minister was forced to practice strict economy to support a family and educate his children upon a salary of $500 per year. We had abundance to eat and were well clothed, and certainly no man ever better enjoyed ministering to the wants of his family than did our loved and honored father. I believe him to have been an eminently good and conscientious man—I do not say faultless. As for Robert, I will say he was as good and obedient a boy as I ever knew; but all this is neither here nor there. He denies that the Bible is the inspired word of God, and gives his reasons. Here you take issue with him. Now, is it not possible to successfully combat his errors without opening the tomb and spattering with calumny our loved and honored dead? Speaking of your father and mother you say: "Would it not have been debasing in me to hook the horses to the plowshare of contempt to turn up the mound of their graves?" True. Now let me ask you if you don't think that the golden rule requires you to unhook your horses before you ruthlessly turn up the sacred dust that hides from the light of day our father's snow-white hair. But "Ingersoll assails the belief of his father." Well, sir, had your father been an infidel, would you now, entertaining the views you do, combat his opinions? That would probably be a very different thing. Ingersoll says he can not believe that God, the father of all of us, ever commanded the Jews to wage wars of extermination against their neighbors, and was delighted at the sight of a babe's blood trickling down the handle of a Jewish spear. Moses said that when a woman gave birth to a son, thirty-three days were necessary to purify her; but if she gave birth to a daughter, sixty-six days were necessary. Ingersoll says that looks to him like nonsense, and he really cannot believe that God ever ordered any such thing. He says he cannot believe that God, who winked at polygamy and established slavery, ever ordered a man to be pounded to death with stones simply for picking up sticks on the Sabbath day. He says he cannot believe that God ever gave express permission to one part of His family to sell diseased meat to the other.

When David says of Somebody, "Let there be none to extend mercy unto him, neither let there be any to favor his fatherless children," he says it is impossible for him to believe that either the words or thought was inspired by the good God. Now if you will draw your theological belt one hole tighter and answer these things, you will do everybody a favor. You ask Ingersoll to retire to his chamber, lock his door and read the fourteenth chapter of John. It is good reading. Let me ask you to read the fifteenth Psalm: "Lord, who shall abide in Thy tabernacle? who shall dwell in Thy holy hill? He that backbiteth not with his tongue nor doeth evil to his neighbor, nor taketh up a reproach against his neighbor." With all due respect, I am yours.

Patti's Cincinnati Illness.

Cincinnati Special to Chicago Times.

So far as Patti is concerned, it is expected, and so announced by bill and advertisement, that she will give in full, Thursday afternoon, the programme originally intended for to-night. No one except her physician and the other sent by the College of Music, and members of her own company, has seen her. The physicians have said that she was not able to sing to-night, but that, if kept perfectly quiet, there is no visible reason why she should not sing Thursday afternoon, and in that expectation the public rests. The president and directors of the College of Music say that they have no reason to doubt that the prima donna is as ill as she says. However, there are indications that there is existing even more than the usual jealousy belonging to the professional singers. Patti hates Mapleson, and turns up her nose at his singers. On the other hand it is known—though to but few—that Mapleson had some time since intimated to the College of Music that his stars were finding fault with the way Patti had been billed as the chief attraction of the opera festival, and intimated that he might find hard work to induce them to sing under the circumstances if his company was not given bigger display type on the bills. Patti's company had expressed pretty much the same sentiments as to the Mapleson singers, and on the whole the life of the College of Music directory has been a peculiarly unhappy one for a few weeks past. To-night Patti was sitting upon a chair, well wrapped, with bottles of medicines around her, and with traces of huskiness in her voice. She expressed herself as feeling better, and said she desired and believed that she would sing on Thursday afternoon.

DELUSIONS ABOUT UTAH.

American-Born Residents Outnumber the Foreign-Born.

From the New York Herald.

There are some popular delusions about the Mormons, and very intelligent people who have visited Salt Lake City for the purpose of making personal investigations there, and fancy that they have a right to pronounce authoritative opinions upon the "Utah question," are not always free from them. One is that the Mormons consist chiefly of foreigners. On the contrary, the American-born inhabitants of Utah outnumber the foreign-born more than two to one. The proportion by the census of 1880 is 99,969 to 43, 994. Dakota, which approximates closely to Utah in the aggregate of its population, having 135,180 inhabitants, while Utah has 143,963, is much more under the domination of a foreign element so far as numbers are concerned. The proportion in Dakota is 51,793 foreign born to only 83,387 natives of the United States. So is the State of Nevada. So are most of the great cities of the continent. The proportions in Utah does not materially differ from that in Rhode Island, one of the original members of the Union. It will not do for the people of the United States to try to shift their own responsibility for the disgusting peculiarities of Utah society upon foreign shoulders. The Mormon religion was an American invention, and the ecclesiastical supremacy over its adherents always has been controlled by Americans. John Taylor, who is the nominal head of the church since Young's death, is English by birth, to be sure, but he by no means inherits Young's autocratic sway. It is shared with coadjutors, most of whom are of American birth, and he himself has been a resident of the United States for half a century. He was with Smith in the Carthage jail in 1844, and was wounded in the affray in which the prophet was killed. Nor have foreigners ever predominated in Utah at any stage of the development of the Mormon community. In 1870 the total population was 86,786, and the respective numbers of American born and foreign were 40,273, and 30,702. In 1860 the total was 56,084, and the respective numbers were 27,519 and 12,754. The bulk of the American born inhabitants also are natives of the territory. No less than 80,847 of the present 99,969 were born upon its own soil, under exclusively federal jurisdiction. Congress has had the power to control them from the cradle in all those features of life which are subject to the regulation of the law. These figures fix the absolute responsibility of the United States Government for what Utah is. As the twig is bent the tree is inclined, and if Congress had bent this twig out of its crookedness while the wood was tender and supple it might have spared itself the present severe efforts to straighten a stout trunk of more than thirty years' growth.

Another delusion about Utah is that the foreign element in its population is recruited from European races which the claimants of a conceited superiority for the so-called Anglo-Saxon stock fancy to be inferior. On the contrary, England makes the chief contribution to it, and next to England come those Scandinavian countries to whose people the Anglo-Saxon stock is close akin. The infrequency of Irish or German Mormons is very remarkable, and the Latin races of Europe never have been hospitable to Mormon missionaries. Has the discipline of the Catholic church anything to do with this? Certainly it is next to impossible to find a Frenchman, an Italian or a Spaniard in Salt Lake City. The proportions in which foreign countries have chiefly contributed to the Mormon community are very constant, as is plain by the following comparative table, which we have compiled from the censuses of 1870 and 1880:

	1870.	1880.
Born in England	16,074	19,684
Born in Scotland	2,391	3,201
Born in Wales	1,783	2,390
Born in Ireland	502	1,321
Born in Denmark	4,957	7,791
Born in Sweden	1,790	3,750
Born in Norway	613	1,214
Born in Switzerland	569	1,040
Born in Germany	358	885

We are satisfied, by inquiry, that the large ratio of increase of Irish and German immigrants exhibited in this table is due to the development of mines in the territory, and not at all to conversions to Mormonism. It reenforces the non-Mormon or so-called Gentile section of the population. Another noteworthy fact is that the Mormon community is not a favorite asylum for Chinese. Notwithstanding the facilities the Pacific railroad affords them for access to Utah, there were but 445 Chinamen there in 1870, and the number had increased only to 501 in 1880.

A third delusion about Utah is that the females greatly outnumber the males. This popular notion among unInquiring people arises from suffering their minds to dwell upon the abundantly stocked seraglios of the wealthy potentates of the Mormon church, without considering that the poverty of most of the agricultural settlers in the territory makes it embarrassing for a multitude of them to support one wife—much more two, three or half a dozen. It is, to be sure, a Mormon practice to marry women for cooks and chambermaids. There are conveniences in the practice in respect to stability of service. But the circumstances of most Mormon husbandmen forbid them to employ cooks or chambermaids, whether by wedding or by wages. Notwithstanding the vigorous preaching of polygamy as a duty for the last twenty-five years it is probable that a majority of the Mormon males still are monogamists for economic reasons, and that polygamy is a luxury, like cigars and champagne. The proportion of the sexes shown by the census of 1880 is 74 471 males to 69,436 females, and lest this excess of males may be ascribed by any one chiefly to the mining immigration it is pertinent to add the figures of the two preceding censuses. In 1870 the males were 44,121 and the females 42,655, and in 1860 they were respectively 29,255 and 20,018. It will be noticed, perhaps, that the total of the population in 1880 indicated by these statistics is only 143,907, differing slightly from that given in the statement of the total with regard to nativity. The difference, which is trivial, arises from a revision of the additions in the census office between the dates of the two census bulletins from which we compile all the figures.

Bread Cast Upon the Waters.

From the Newport (R. I.) Mercury Feb. 11.

At the opening of the new First Baptist Church in Norwich recently, Capt. Ebenezer Morgan, of Groton, who is well known as one of the most liberal men in his denomination, the Baptist, presided. In the course of the evening, Mr. Morgan took the floor, as he said, to beg, which he was always willing to do in the name of the Lord. He stated that he had nine churches on his hands, three of which belonged to him personally, and all of which he had aided in building, yet he had not done so much but what he could do more. He then contributed $100 more for the church, although he gave $1,500 at its beginning. The Captain then related how he was sometimes surprised by donations and results. "In 1881 I exceeded the amount I had pledged to the Lord $9,000. When I discovered it I was a little surprised, and I said to myself, 'Ebenezer, if you go on this way you will soon be bankrupt.' I felt so. But in less than eight days after I found out that I had overpaid $9,000 I received a dividend from an unexpected source. I always felt as if that came directly from the Lord. No one ever gives to the Lord without reward. We send out little vessels worth $5.000 and they return with sealskins worth $70,000. I am pledged to send $12,000 to a foreign field immediately and $60,000 within two years and I shall do it." His earnest pleas ecured $1.100 for the church. Capt. Morgan is abundantly possessed of this world's goods, yet his generosity in advancing the cause of religion by large donations keeps pace with his gains.

UNPARALLELED SUCCESS.
58,000 COPIES of the FIRST NUMBER Sold in Three Days.
The Demand Still Increasing.

THE success of "OUR CONTINENT" has been truly phenomenal. Nothing like it has ever been known. The demand has exceeded all publishing experience, both in the old world and this. From every quarter comes the news of increasing demand for "OUR CONTINENT," and the ten best presses at our disposal and two binderies cannot begin to deliver "OUR CONTINENT" to the trade as promptly as we could wish. But this delay is unavoidable. We had great expectations, but we never flattered ourselves that we should have such an extraordinary demand for our first number. We never supposed that "OUR CONTINENT" would sell at the rate of four hundred and thirty-five copies in less than two days at a single news-stand—that of the Pennsylvania R. R. depot in Philadelphia—or that many of the news companies would increase their orders in two days after receiving their first supply. But great success has more than confirmed the original belief with which we started "OUR CONTINENT," a belief that the American people would gladly welcome and enthusiastically support a first-class illustrated literary weekly—a weekly that would seek as its exclusive field the development of American authorship and American art, both of the pencil and engraver; a weekly that would build up American literature by encouraging our native authors; a weekly that would not live by the privacy of its matter or the theft of its illustrations; in brief, a weekly that has for its sole aim the best that can be produced in American Literature and American Art.
The second number of "OUR CONTINENT" is now ready and for sale by News Dealers, Railroad News Agents, Booksellers and Postmasters. Price Ten Cents a copy. Specimen copies sent free.

PANSLAVISM.

The Insurrection Against Austria in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

A Flame Which May be Fanned Into a European War.

What the Slavish Races Under Austrian Domination Want.

The recent uprising in Bosnia and Herzegovina and the causes which lead to it have been the subject of much comment in the late European cablegrams. That the people of this district cannot be kept down and that these outbreaks will last as long as Herzegovina does is a fact that has been often stated. The following facts in regard to the matter comes from a gentleman who has made the subject a study, and who talks out of sympathy with the people whose cause he defends. A POST-DISPATCH reporter was strolling around Union Depot last night, when he noticed a tall dark-skinned man with long black hair walking up and down the platform, smoking a cigar. The appearance of the stranger was such as to attract attention, and he was the subject of some little notice, to which he paid no heed. The reporter approached and began the conversation by inquiring about the departure of a Western train. The gentleman smiled and said:

"I am a total stranger, not only in the city but in the country. I am sorry I can't give you any information."

The reporter continued to walk up and down with the stranger. Fresh cigars were purchased and finally the talk drifted towards European affairs and the Herzegovinian insurrection. "Yes," said the stranger, "I know something about the uprising. As you may have gathered from my appearance, I am a Greek, and my home is in Montenegro. Demetrius Cattaro is my name and I have been visiting your country just three weeks."

The reporter immediately became interested, but Mr. Cattaro continued to talk in a manner which showed what interest he took in the subject.

"Yes," said he, "the insurrection had already begun. Our people are of one race with the insurgents, and we feel that their cause might be ours at any day."

"What was the origin of the present revolt?"

"Just this: Under the treaty of Berlin, made July 13, 1878, Austria was given a sort of right to maintain order in the provinces mentioned, Turkey being believed to be unable to do so. Lately, however, Austria has been doing more. Some of the inhabitants of the Austrian province of Dalmatia, which borders upon Herzegovina, have in the past enjoyed immunity from military service, and it was thought best to include them in the conscription, and for some reason—possibly because the people were of a kindred race—the range of conscription was also extended to Bosnia and Herzegovina. Instantly the inhabitants [of t]hese districts

WERE IN ARMS,

[claim]ing that under the text of the Berlin [tre]aty the Austrian Government had no right [to] compel them to serve in the army, [as t]hey were not Austrian subjects. Imme[dia]tely the revolt spread, and, though [re]ports to the contrary are wide spread [thr]ough, this is a more difficult uprising to [han]dle than any which ever occurred in the [pro]vinces."

"What is the nature of Austria's interest in [Bo]snia, Herzegovina, etc?"

"I will tell you. You know that the late [wa]r between Russia and Turkey had its [ori]gin

IN AN INSURRECTION

[in t]he districts we are speaking about. The [Ber]lin treaty, which was officially promulgated on the 13th of July, 1878, and signed by the representatives of all the powers, and also by the representative of Turkey, made certain provisions in regard to the northwestern provinces of Turkey. Article XXV of that document said in substance that: The two provinces Bosnia and Herzegovina were to be occupied, and their government was to be administered by Austria. This is the sole claim or warranty that the Austrain empire has upon the territory, for, although, at the end of this article it is asserted that the two governments of Turkey and Austria are to settle the details of the affair between themselves, in no other place in the treaty is any reference made to this extension of Austrian supremacy. But lately the Austrian empire has taken much more ground, and has been claiming sovereignty."

"Without any reason, you think?"

"Of course; and everybody else thinks so with me. M. Bernoit Brunswick, in his 'Trane de Berlin,' says, on the asserted authority of Prince Bismarck, who was president of the Berlin Congress, that the position of the inhabitant, of the two provinces was modified only in this wise.

THE OTTOMAN EMPIRE

had shown itself incapable of supplying administrative control, and hence Austria had received a mandate to make good this want, and accomplish the great end of maintaining order. But the mandate did not include sovereignty, for the provinces were still to be considered as a part of the Turkish Empire. Abdel Hamed still remained their ruler and the people were still his subjects. Nothing was changed, except from an administrative point of view. This seems to have been the ground taken by the Austrian Government at the time the provinces were occupied and for some time subsequent to that period; but of late a change in policy, which I have mentioned, has taken place."

"What is the extent of the insurrection?"

"I cannot say authoritatively, but, there are unmistakable signs that it is spreading rapidly. For instance advices from Austrian sources begin to show their anxiety by belittling the whole affair, and represent that it is confined to a few localities, and that the insurgent chieftains are, by their assaults on isolated detachments of Austrian troops, endeavoring to arouse the enthusiasm of the people.

ON THE OTHER HAND

reports are received that Austrian administration, at least in Herzegovina, is at an end, outside of a few of the fortified and garrisoned towns. You might have noticed in the cablegrams that lately the Hungarian government was getting troubled and that the editors of the Vienna newspapers were summoned before the police authorities, and were informed that the publication of intelligence regarding the movements going on in Herzegovina and the adjacent country was forbidden. At about the same time M. Tisza, the Hungarian Premier, sent a circular to the editors of newspapers in Pesth, asking them, on the score of patriotism, to suppress news that might come to them from the disaffected provinces. It is not an easy matter, in the absence of telegraphs and railroads, for foreigners to collect reliable information, and hence the world knows little of what is going on in these mountainous districts on the east of the Adriatic sea. The prime fact is that an insurrection has again broken out in Bosnia and Herzegovina, and that the Austrian government is hurrying into these provinces to suppress the uprising. It will be remembered that the late war between Russia and Turkey had its apparent origin in an insurrection in this district, and, in view of the momentous issues involved in again opening at the sword's point the Eastern question, the Austrian Government justifies itself in seeking to crush out the revolt as speedily as may be. Whether success will attend its efforts, or whether the trouble will lead to larger complications time alone can show.

REGIMENT AFTER REGIMENT

"What will Montenegro do?"

"That can only be guessed at.

PRINCE NIKITA,

of Montenegro, has been appealed to by the Government at Vienna to prevent supplies being sent to the insurgents over the borders of his domain; but, while he has expressed himself willing to do all that he can in reason to continue the good understanding existing between him and the Austrian Government, he seems also to have intimated pretty clearly that this was a question in which his influence must count for little or nothing; in a word, that his people, being of a kindred race with the insurgents, were their friends, and would help them whether he wished it or not. Unauthorized assistance from Montenegro would, however, be of small moment, for the inhabitants of that country, never in very prosperous circumstances, are now suffering from the effects of two disastrous harvests."

"What will Russia do."

"That is the great key to the question. Russia and Austria are rivals. Will they unite now? Since the beginning of the trouble the Russian government has officially expressed the warmest sympathy for Austria. When it is considered that in this matter the traditional interests of Austria and Russia are directly antagonistic, it may be safe to assume that there was not much heart in these diplomatic professions. Russia has always arrogated to herself the leadership of the Slavic races. The people of Bosnia, Herzegovina, Bulgaria and other present or past provinces of northern Turkey, look upon the Czar as a species of race ruler, a belief that has been

STEADILY ENCOURAGED

by the organizations of the national party in Russia. Before the last Turko-Russian war, the Russian government, while professing the kindest intentions toward Turkey, permitted, if it did not encourage and aid, those of its subjects who were helping on revolts in the northern provinces of the Turkish empire. These old methods of the Russian government are understood perfectly well at Vienna, and it would seem that the Austrian government had now found reason for believing that it was being made the victim of a similar procedure. It is asserted that the extent and organization of the insurrection—a statement which conflicts with the other assertion also made, that the insurrection is not extensive—indicate that it has been planned, and is directed from some foreign country, and of course Russia can be the only party criminated."

"But if Russia fails to come to the rescue?"

"Unaided by Russia, the inhabitants of Bosnia and Herzegovina cannot hope long to contend against the immense strength of Austria. Of the justice of their contention you can draw your own conclusions from what I have said respecting the Berlin Treaty. What they desire is political autonomy, but at the present time in eastern Europe the wishes of the people who have not the power to compel a respect for them, receive but slight consideration from the great statesmen who direct international affairs.

"Do you think Russia will interfere?"

"Yes, if the fear of Bismarck does not retard her. Nothing else will. That there is more than a suspicion in this, is very clear from the decided action taken by Prince Bismarck. Whatever the German chancellor's ultimate aims may be, it is certain that he means that Austria shall possess herself of Bosnia and Herzegovina, and will not tolerate interference with her in this proceeding. The German ambassador at St. Petersburg was, therefore, instructed to say that, if Russia persists in intermeddling, he should have to demand his passport, which is the first step to a remonstrance backed up with bayonets. The ostensible cause of this remark was a Panslavic speech delivered by

GEN. SKOBELOFF.

It is the misfortune of an absolute monarch that he is held accountable for the impolitic speeches of his subjects. The reply made to the German ambassador by the Russian government is not known; perhaps none was expected. Gen Ignatieff has had long experience in the art of secretly fomenting disturbances south of the Danube; but even he may well be apprehensive of continuing a practice which Prince Bismarck has announced he will not tolerate. A war in which Russia should find herself opposed to both Germany and Austria would be an exceedingly dear purchase from the perils of Nihilism."

"Are you going back to Montenegro?"

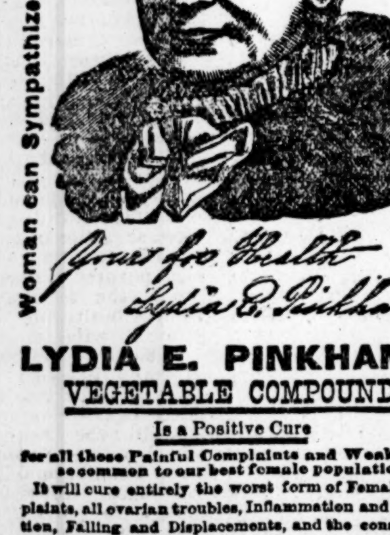

"Yes, I am on my way East now, and before one month I will be near the seat of trouble and will be able to give more details."

By this time the Vandalia had backed up and Mr. Cattaro bid the reporter good night and got into the sleeper. Altogether he was a most mysterious man. Notwithstanding his foreign appearance, he spoke English very well. He was ready to talk about anything but the object of his present trip. All approaches toward that subject he met with persistent silence.

WELCOME the cold wave. Perhaps it will seal up these horrid streets for a day or two.

THE city should stop buying vaccine virus from a pox farmer who declines to have his laboratory inspected.

KANSAS statistics show 150 idiots in that State. A careful and industrious man could pick up that many within two blocks of the St. Louis City Hall almost any day in the week.

THERE is no destitution in Louisiana, as is alleged by the newspapers. The people down there are always a little hard up just before Mardi Gras, but after the show is over they have money to lend.

WE would like to put it to Maj. JOHN EDWARDS, who is a man of good sense as well as a gallant chevalier, whether, in his opinion, the Grand Army of the Republic is an institution to be fostered and encouraged.

AN establishment devoted to the manufacture of fire-works, at Chester, Pa., blew up this morning. The pyrotechnic display was grand but it was expensive. Fifteen people were killed and seventy others injured.

THE New York Herald is raving because Mr. VEST has had Kansas City made a port of entry. The Herald doesn't care how many little Custom House officers we have so they are confined to the creeks and inlets that are reached by tide water.

THE Globe Democrat refers this morning to a distinguished gentleman who has gone to "that bourne from whence no traveler returns." Perhaps while he is absent he will also visit that "undiscovered country" referred to by WM SHAKESPEARE, from whose bourne no traveling man was ever known to return.

THOSE Eastern newspapers occasionally strike a high plane. "He is now merely a ridiculous old blatherskite, with some venom still, but with no fangs to lodge it," says the New York Tribune, referring to the editor of one of the most respectable journals in that city. It would be interesting to know whether a blatherskite has fangs as a rule.

ONE of the first acts of the new Egyptian ministry, from which England and France expected nothing but repudiation and retrogression, has been to decree the absolute abolition of slavery throughout Egypt. They have already strengthened the credit of the viceroyalty to a remarkable degree and seem to be determined to go right along saving the country in spite of European forebodings.

A SAN FRANCISCO surgeon is becoming enormously wealthy by curing obesity. He simply chloroforms the patient, skins him or her, cuts off the fat, turns the skin back to a nice fit, sews it together and there you are. Being of an economical turn of mind he was establishing a soap factory to utilize the dissevered fat when the police gathered him in as a nuisance and his singular specialty was developed in the Police Court.

MLLE. DORANI, the talented pupil of the Cincinnati College of Music, sang "Fidelio" at the Opera Festival the other night, and the town went wild over the performance. When the lady rehearsed the part here and charged the people three dollars a head for the privilege of listening to her, there was no enthusiasm. In fact, she carried the audience back to the "Pinafore" era when choir singers blossomed into prime donne in a single night.

THE Spiritualists last week had a severe time in this country. A seance was broken up in Brooklyn and a talented medium shown to be a fraud. In San Francisco a conspiracy to expose a fine female medium worked quite successfully. An agile man leaped over the barrier which separated the audience from the cabinet, seized the materialized spirit and revealed to the assembled company a substantial young woman who was very scantily and unconventionally clad, and by no means wore a smile. The name of the lady in San Francisco is Mrs. C. H. SAWYER, and it is understood that her facilities for communicating with people in the Spirit Land are quite superior.

THE streets of St. Louis have passed through a terrible ordeal this winter. The mildness of the weather has been their destruction. They have lain in their own mud and slush all season, and, as a result, they have been cut up as they never have been cu up before. Between tax-dodging and our iron Charter we have no money in our Treasury for street repairs, and the present Municipal Government hasn't nerve enough to compel property owners to pave the thoroughfares in front of their possessions. If it were not for the Constitutional objection that might be raised, we would ask Congress for an appropriation to put our streets in decent condition. Our city bids fair to be soon an object of National sympathy.

LABOUCHERE has kept the statistics of the parodies offered to his paper, Truth, and the results are very curious. Most of the parodies are on OUIDA, who seems to use a style which anybody can imitate. After that gifted lady come in the order named: DICKENS, Dr. JOHNSON, Miss BRADDON, RUSKIN, ANTHONY TROLLOPE, LYTTON BULWER, JEFFERIES, CARLYLE, RHODA BROUGHTON, MACAULAY, MAYNE REID, WILKIE COLLINS and BOSWELL. The parodies are all tolerably good and indicate that with a certain amount of ingenuity any author's style can be so closely imitated that it cannot be told from an original. If Dr. IRELAND had the facility of the modern parodists his SHAKESPEAREAN forgery of Vortigern would not have been exposed.

EDWIN BOOTH is certainly a great favorite with the St. Louis public. He has been playing to crowded houses at the Grand Opera-house this week and the impression prevails that he is a great actor. But when Mr. BOOTH comes before the curtain to acknowledge the plaudits of his auditors why doesn't he unbend a little and smile—just a little smile, as the pretty song goes in "Fatinitza." There is no need of looking tragic and depressed when bowing to an audience in front of the curtain. Last night Mr. BOOTH, as "Bertuccio," received the applause of his delighted friends as a Hindoo idol might receive the sacrifices of its worshippers. He looked as lugubrious as a dealer in cotton futures. Perhaps Mr. BOOTH has resolved to never smile again.

THE markets are bracing up all around and the financial outlook is much brighter than it was three days ago. There is a better feeling in money circles and it is generally believed that the depression of the past week will be followed soon by a delightful reaction. We regard our banks here as in an entirely safe and solvent condition. We can say this in all good feeling because we are entirely independent of them. We never asked any favors of them. Our opinion about gambling in futures or "options" are, however, unchanged. We have no more respect for the gambling that is done on 'Change than that which is done at PATE'S.

POLITENESS has received a dreadful set back in the state of Georgia. On a warm day last summer HARRY HILL was riding on a railroad train in that commonwealth. As noon approached the weather became more sultry, and Mr. HILL, in a state of desperation, resolved to take the consequences, and standing up in his seat deliberately removed his coat and sat down in his shirt sleeves. The ladies screamed when they saw what he was doing, and one of them is said to have fainted. The conductor was summoned and with his hair standing on his head, he produced a copy of "Etiquette of the Aristocracy," and in a foot note to Canon XLIV, which comments on the impropriety of a Cavalier's wiping his nose on his coat sleeve, pointed out the rule about shirt sleeves. The conductor and some other gentlemen, being goaded thereto by Mr. HILL'S flippant remark that Georgian full dress consisted simply of a paper collar and a pair of brass spurs, set upon the offender and threw him off the train. Last week he recovered $5,000 damages from the railroad and the Supreme Court has decided that as long as a Georgia gentleman keeps his socks on—a sanitary precaution which other passengers have a right to demand—he cannot be ejected from a public conveyance.

THE anti-Polygamy bill was passed by the Senate yesterday. It covers the whole case against the Mormons, and its sections have been drawn with an exactness which seems to meet every possible phase of the twin relic. Every person having a husband or wife living who may hereafter, in a territory or any other place over which the United States has exclusive jurisdiction, marry another person, and any man who simultaneously marries more than one woman is guilty of polygamy and shall be fined not more than $500 and imprisoned not more than five years. Any person who hereafter lives with more than one woman as his wife shall be fined not more than $300 or imprisoned not more than six months, or both. In any prosecutions under this act is shall be sufficient cause of challenge to any juryman that he has been living in breach of the act. The proposed juryman may be questioned upon his oath as to this ground of challenge, and if he declines to answer on the ground that his reply would criminate him he shall be rejected. No admission made by a proposed juryman in this examination shall be used against him in any subsequent trial in which he may be defendant. The President it authorized to grant amnesty to such classes of offenders guilty of bigamy or polygamy before the passage of this act as he shall see fit. The issue of bigamous and polygamous marriages, known as Mormon marriages, born prior to January 1, 1883, are legitimatized. No polygamist, bigamist or person living with more than one woman shall be entitled to vote at any election, or to hold any office or place of public trust, honor or emolument in any Territory under the United States. All registration or election offices in the Territory of Utah are declared vacant, and all the work of registering voters, conducting elections and receiving or rejecting votes, until other provision is made by the Legislative Assembly of the Territory, shall be done by officers appointed by a board of five persons to be named by the President. Not more than three members of this board may be members of the same political party, they shall be paid $8,000 a year, and shall continue in office until the Legislative Assembly makes provision for doing their work. The canvass and return of all votes for members of the Legislature shall be returned to this board, who will issue certificates of election to such persons who, being eligible, appear to have been legally elected. The board may not exclude any person from a certificate of election on account of any opinion he may have held or expressed on the subject of polygamy, nor shall they refuse to count the vote of a person on account of his opinion on polygamy or bigamy. Each House of the Legislature shall have full power to decide upon the election and qualifications of its members, and may make such laws as are not inconsistant with the laws of the United States.

WAR is imminent between the independent dukedoms of Maryland and Virginia. Piratical oyster-boats from the former commonwealth have been dredging the succulent bivalve out of the waters of the latter, being inspired thereto by the devil, and against the peace and dignity of the plantation of Virginia. A fleet of hostile oyster craft are now lying in the mouth of Rappahannock river, and Gov. CAMERON left Norfolk this morning with one steamer, half a dozen skiffs of the line, and two or three canoes of war, armed with artillery and shot-guns, to offer battle to the proud invader. The next blast that sweeps from the East by southeast may bring to our ears the clash of resounding arms. The pirate oystermen are well armed and the State of Virginia is aroused. Deeds of derring-do will make the Chesapeake run red with human gore, and Maryland and Virginia will be locked in a fratricidal embrace before this morning's sun has purpled the blue hills of Beulah. The battle of Lepanto, the Spanish Armada, NELSON at Trafalgar, Sir RICHARD GREVILLE at Flores in the Azores, all rise before the mind's eye as we think of that gallant band of Maryland pirates about to engage with the Virginia corsairs. Of course reprisals will follow and we will hear of Maryland feluccas swooping down on quiet Virginian hamlets and carrying off the peaceful peasantry to be sold as slaves in the interior. No father along the eastern shore will feel easy in his mind till both his GIROFLE and GIROFLA are married and settled. Watch towers will be established along the banks of the Chesapeake, and beacon fires made ready to light when long, low, rakish, black craft appear suddenly in the waters of the lower bay. At one step we have gone back over three centuries, to the delightful and romantic uncertainties of life on the old Mediterranean.

IT is quite evident that Gov. CRITTENDEN at some time in his life has had a horse stolen. He has just refused a pardon to WM. LEATHERS, a convict horse thief from Green county, whose release is asked for on the ground that his mind was diseased when he committed the offense. The Governor, in a letter, declares emphatically that he will not allow the insanity dodge to be played by anybody of less rank in crime than a murderer. He says:

I will not pardon a horse thief. I care not how many petitions request it. The sooner this is understood the better it will be for those engaged in such applications. It will be time and labor lost. All other criminals can entertain a hope of relief, but horse thieves—when the prison door closes on such, the sentence must be completed, as far as I am concerned, unless the higher demands of the State demand a release for other purposes.

If the Governor hasn't had his predjudices excited against the appropriators of equine quadrupeds by personal loss he is certainly playing for the support and sympathy of the populace of that large and prosperous section of the State in which the Eighth Commandment imparted to MOSES is translated to read "Thou shalt not steal a hoss."

WHILE admitting that the POST-DISPATCH is a very funny, as well as a very clever newspaper, the Sedalia Bazoo insists that we have made a great mistake in criticising Justice MILLER'S action in the KRING case. It says in his defense:

Justice Miller may certainly be trusted to know what he is about. It is more than likely that he is perfectly honest in what he has done, and if we are to understand that the POST-DISPATCH impeaches Justice Miller's honesty, it is the first instance of anything of that kind on record. Justice Miller is old—near the close of a life-time of honorable service. It seems strange that he should begin to be unreliable and dishonest in this late day.

You should make it a point to grasp the history of the country occasionally. You ought to know that the greater part of Mr. MILLER'S life was passed in the remote regions of Kentucky as a medical empiric. His attention turning to law, he went to the bar, and sought a new field in the omphacine State of Iowa. There he rose to a position on the bench. During the terrible uncivil War, when all things civil were lost sight of in the whirlwind of passion, he was picked up by Mr. LINCOLN and placed on the Supreme Bench. His promotion was brought about through political influence, purely. He was needed for unscrupulous partizan ends. Since seating himself on the woolsack of the Supreme Bench, MILLER has been universally regarded as the friend of the big financial corporations which threaten the perpetuity of the Republic. He is known as the friend of JAY GOULD. He never gave a decision in all his career adverse to that gentleman's interests. During the electoral trouble of 1876-7 he openly cursed and denounced Mr. TILDEN in the streets of Washington, with all the vehemence of his intemperate nature, and a few days afterward took an oath to sit impartially on his case. We would like to know where the editor of the Sedalia Bazoo has been keeping himself for the last twenty years that he has not heard Mr. MILLER'S integrity called into question.

AT their banquet three years ago the Knights of St. Patrick introduced Gen. Hancock as the next Democratic candidate for President of the United States. Sure enough, the General was nominated, and the Knights, it is said, intend to present a candidate for 1884 at the annual gathering next month.—Republican.

As the KNAPPS are understood to control the Knights of St. Patrick for political and social purposes, it is possible that they are going to give TILDEN a little send-off next 17th. Or, is BILL MORRISON the man?

LIE still, Mr. Hendricks, lie still. It is not you they are calling; it is Samuel J. Tilden.—Sedalia Democrat.

It will take a very robust toot on GABRIEL'S horn to arouse either of these distinguished political cadavers.

PERSONAL.

—Joseph Winter, a medical student of Vienna, has received the prize of 100 ducats for a national hymn suited to Austria and Hungary, which was offered by the Deutsche Zeitung, of Vienna.

—Dr. Mary Walker disapproves of Oscar Wilde's knee-breeches because they display too much of his limbs. She thinks the Bloomer style much more decent and becoming.

—Modest Mr. Wilde tells a reporter that he doesn't trouble himself any more about what the newspapers say of him. He remembers that both Keats and Shelley were ridiculed, and therefore expects an ignorant mob to poke fun at him.

—According to the Danish paper Ude og Hjemme, Mr. Bjornstjerne Bjornson, the novelist, has a fjine bjhouse in the bjeautiful Gausdal, and kjeeps it wjide openj in sjummer for bvjsjitors to whjom hje gjives bno endj of cjoffee and cjakes.

—Ex-Senator Thurman appears to be the most jovial and contented of the retired statesmen. He laughed a reporter out of his room in New York the other day, saying that he really knew no more about politics than his friend John Smith.

—Senator Sherman passes much of his time nowadays in sending out short-legged truths to catch long-legged lies. Pitkin started a regiment of the latter off towards the West the other day, and Mr. Sherman's truths are trying very hard to overhaul them.

—Gen. C. A. Whittier is building what the Boston Herald calls "the finest and costliest private dwelling" in that city. No less than $200,000 will be expended in its erection. It will be seven stories high and will contain fifty rooms, most of which will be finished in costly woods.

—William P. Ridgeway, of San Francisco, fell in love with the widow Forbes, and engaged to marry her. He was about seventy years old, and had an affection of the heart, besides being a sufferer from paralysis. His physicians assured him that marriage would be speedily followed by death. Unwilling to take the risk he broke his promise. These facts were presented in his defence to a suit for damages, but the jury did not deem them material, and gave the widow a verdict of $5,000.

Our Horrid Sidewalks.

ST. LOUIS, February 16, 1882.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Like every citizen of St. Louis who has the interest of the city at heart, I am anxious to see anything done that will secure good streets; but is it not equally as essential that we should have good sidewalks? There is perhaps some excuse for not having good streets—the treasury may be very low—but this cannot apply and does not apply to the sidewalks. If we have poor sidewalks, and if they are kept in no repair, the blame is to be found in the culpable neglect of those having the sidewalks in charge. I will name a number of localities—and prominent ones, too—where, to my knowledge, no repairs have been made for years, and where part of the walks are entirely bare of any material whatever. Look at the sidewalk on Washington avenue, between Second and Third. Look at that particular part of it alongside of Meyer, Bain & Co.; is it not disgraceful? And yet the property belongs to a man of means—why is he not made to repair it? Certainly it does not need money in the treasury to do that! Look at the sidewalk on each side of Vine street between the alley and Second. Could a more disgraceful sidewalk be found anywhere? Look at the sidewalk on the North side of Vine, between Second and Maine, and look at the ashes placed by merchants in the alley between Second and Maine. Do you think these things would occur, if we had efficient public servants? Again, look at the piece of sidewalk at the northwest corner of Vine and Commercial Alley! Why, it has been bare of bricks for over a year. Is there no remedy for this? Certainly there is, and a very simple one, too—compel the property-owner to repair it. Every thing here seems to be thrown into the streets; shavings, straw, ashes, pieces of tin, barrel hoops, and what else, God knows; on that part of Commercial alley, immediately in the rear of Shapleigh, Cantwell Hardware Co., the merchants act as though it was especially opened as a convenient place to throw all their dirt. Would such things be allowed, if the officials attended to their business? In the language of the Hon. Bardwell Slote, N. M.—not much. One would think that the merchants themselves would take some interest in the matter, and show some pride, but they do not. Let everyone keep his sidewalk in perfect repair and clean; if he does not let him be made to do so, then we would, at least, have good and respectable looking sidewalks. Good streets, and good and nicely kept sidewalks are an evidence of thrift, and it would be noticed by all visiting here, and it would induce capital to locate here, and St. Louis would soon stand where she should have stood long since if attention had been paid to this matter. Can you not stir the merchants to move in this matter? Can you not stir up our public servants? A. V. C.

Wants His Jokes Fresh.

GALENA, KAN., February 15, 1882.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Reading your article "Severe on Saleslady," in justice to the writer of said article, please ask him through your valuable paper, if he did not get his jokes out of one of the numerous almanacs that are distributed gratis. Being a constant admirer and reader of your paper I dislike to hear rehashed jokes.

SAMUEL OE POZEN.

Our Municipal Extravagance.

ST. LOUIS, February 17, 1882.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Don't you think it about time something was being done by our present city administration to correct and remedy the legacy left us by Overstolz and his "gang," in the shape of a pay-roll of $120,000 per month for officers only? Just think and figure for a moment $1,400,000 a year. Is there any wonder we have muddy streets! (Did you ever hear of them not finding money to pay salaries?) Our charter gives the Municipal Assembly the authority to consolidate, abolish and fix the pay of all officials, and with a little executive and legislative shaking up, such as abolishing the sewer, wharf and park commissioners offices and requiring the presidents of the board, the street and water commissioners to do all the work. Also abolish about one-fourth of all city offices, as well as discharge about one-fourth of all the officials left, and then reduce the salary of all officials one-fourth that receive over $100 per month, and you will very soon find money enough in the treasury to not only repair our streets, but be able to pay the day laborer $1 75 per day for doing the work. If you have a better remedy propose it. Our present condition is unquestionably a legacy left by Overstolz with malice aforethought. T. H.

The Elevators.

ST. LOUIS, February 17, 1882.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

An article in the Globe-Democrat of this morning, evidently amplified with exaggerations from a paragraph in your paper of yesterday, does injustice to the St. Louis elevators. It is not true that the Neely Elevator fire in Chicago prompted the action of the Board of Fire Underwriters here, inasmuch as the first inspection was completed before that fire occurred. As to most of the elevators, the Board Inspector reports an entirely cleanly and satisfactory condition, indicating carefulness and vigilance on the part of the persons in charge. To this general commendation there was but one emphatic exception, as was correctly stated in the POST-DISPATCH yesterday, and that the elevator proprietors are, for their own sake, eager to remove, independently of any question of insurance. The elevator interest here has become a very large one indeed, and is thought by the public, not unreasonably, to be a bonanza for the owners. They therefore do not deprecate, but most cordially welcome any efficient influence which will aid them in removing the danger of accident to their property. INSURANCE.

The British Army.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Could you kindly inform a subscriber the proportion of Irishmen in the English army, and oblige AN ENGLISHMAN.

[It is estimated that one-third of the English army, not counting the Sepoys, is of Irish birth.—ED. P.-D.]

Give Us Health Bulletins.

From the Chicago Times.

No word concerning the state of Mr. Tilden's health has been given out lately. It is probably not improved by the sudden appearance of Mr. Thurman in New York for the purpose of effecting a reconciliation of the warring Democratic factions of the state.

Slurring Our Musical Taste.

From the Denver Tribune.

The Mapleson season in St. Louis seems to have been an undisguised failure. Italian opera is not calculated to succeed in a town where the fashionable music teachers hang around the beer saloons whistling "Mulligan Guards" for the drinks.

Strategic Movements in Politics.

A GRAVE SUBJECT.

The Domestic Troubles of the Graves'—A Husband Driven Away.

Judge Thayer had to dispose to-day of a motion for alimony in the divorce case of Ottilie K. against James D. Graves. At the same time a question of plea in abatement may be discussed, the husband having some time since filed a petition for divorce in Howard county. This is a somewhat peculiar domestic conflict. The husband, now residing in Howard county, stated that he was married to Ottilie Oertell in this city November 6, 1879, and continued to reside with her until a few days before last Christmas. He alleged that he was always kind and indulgent to his young and pretty wife and that he at all times liberally supported her. He complained, however, that her conduct was such as to render his condition intolerable; that she was wasteful and extravagant in her habits and violent in temper toward him. Specially charging acts and grievances Mr. Graves alleged that on one occasion in the presence of the family, Mrs. Graves threw a dinner plate at her husband; on another occasion she struck him with her shoe-heel, and another time handled a knife in a threatening manner. The husband further complained that his wife used coarse, vulgar and profane language, to his mortification and shame. Finally, he complains that her conduct rendered his condition intolerable and he was forced to leave St. Louis and take up his residence in Howard county. The wife's petition, filed here in Judge Thayer's court was referred to a few days since in the POST-DISPATCH. The lady, young, handsome and fashionably attired, was present in court this morning. It was somewhat difficult to reconcile the damaging allegation of the husband that improper language should escape from such coral lips and refined surroundings. Mrs. Graves rested her prayer for divorce on the ground that her husband worried her incessantly with complaints of extravagance; that he kept late hours and neglected her shamefully at delicate periods, and behaved generally in an unfeeling and harsh manner toward her. Mrs. Graves further stated that her husband was unreasonably close concerning household affairs, and that he insisted upon retaining in the family a nurse distasteful to her. The final cause of the wife's complaint was that one day when she was temporarily absent from home visiting a friend, one Mr. Lewis, a friend of her husband came and abducted the baby, Taylor Belden Graves, a child of eight months, whisking up its clothes and hurrying off with it to the custody of its father, who now has its control and possession in Howard county. The husband is represented by M. W. Watts and the wife by W. H. H. Russell. Judge Thayer, after calling the case decided that, as a motion for plea in abatement was pending, the alimony matter could not be heard to-day. The husband had filed a petition in Howard county, and the first question to be disposed of was: "Where shall this case be tried; in St. Louis or Howard county?" The hearing on that point was fixed for Monday.

BLAINE'S GREAT SPEECH.

The Garfield Memorial Exercises on the 27th of February.

A Brilliant Programme—Arthur and Grant to Hear Garfield's Eulogy—Magnificent Opportunity for Blaine.

(From the Cincinnati Commercial.)

WASHINGTON, February 15.—Representative McKinley, of Ohio, sat in his room at the Ebbitt to-day opening applications for tickets to the Garfield memorial services, which will be held on the 27th inst. Mr. McKinley is Chairman of the House Committee on these services, and Senator Sherman is Chairman of the Senate Committee. Both are besieged with applicants for seats on this day. Mr. Blaine is said to be troubled in the same way. Mos of the applicants receive a stereotyped letter stating that there are no tickets to give out. In the main this is true. Each member of Congress has been given but three tickets each, and in many instances these are required for his personal use. Mr. Blaine and Mrs. Garfield have each been given a limited number of tickets to dispose of, and this is about all the tickets that are to be had. The Governor of each state will be given a ticket, and ma ny of them have signified their intention to be present. Gov. Foster, of Ohio, has been specially invited. The most numerous applications for seats come from Maine, New York, Illinois and Michigan.

The programme for the services is now complete. The few tickets to be had will soon be ready for distribution. Each one will be accompanied by a handsome souvenir in the shape of an illuminated card containing a portrait of the late president, the date of his birth, of the inauguration, death and of the services in his memory. The name of James G. Blaine, orator of the occasion, will follow. The design of these cards has been placed in the hands of a well-known Eastern stationer, and will doubtless be beautifully executed. When Congress adjourns, on Saturday, the 25th, it will be until Tuesday. On Monday, the 27th, the Capitol will be closed to all except the members and officers of Congress.

At 10 o'clock the east door leading to the rotunda will be opened to those to whom invitations have been extended, under the joint resolution of Congress, by the presiding officers of the two Houses, and to those holding tickets of admission to the galleries.

The hall of the House of Representatives will be opened for the admission of Representatives and to those who have invitations, who will be conducted to the seats assigned to them, as follows:

The President and ex-Presidents of the United States and special guests will be seated in front of the Speaker.

The Chief Justice and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court will occupy seats next to the President and ex-Presidents and special guests, on the right of the Speaker.

The Cabinet officers, the General of the army and Admiral of the navy, and the officers of the army and navy who, by name, have received the thanks of Congress, will occupy seats on the left of the Speaker.

The Chief Justice and Judges of the Court of Claims and the Chief Justice and Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia will occupy seats directly rear of the Supreme Court.

The Diplomatic Corps will occupy the first row of seats.

Ex Vice-Presidents, Senators and Senators will occupy seats in the second, third, fourth and fifth rows, on east side main aisle.

Representatives will occupy seats on side of main aisle and in rear of the Senators on east side.

Commissioners of the District, Governors States and Territories, Assistant Heads Departments and invited guests will occupy seats in rear of representatives.

The Executive Gallery will be reserved exclusively for the families of the Supreme Court, and the families of the Cabinet and the invited guests of the President. Tickets thereto will be delivered to the Private Secretary of the President.

The Diplomatic Gallery will be reserved exclusively for the families of the members of the Diplomatic corps. Tickets thereto will be delivered to the Secretary of State.

The Reporters' Gallery will be reserved exclusively for the use of the reporters for the press. Tickets thereto will be delivered to the press committee.

The official reporters of the Senate and of the House will occupy the reporters' desk in front of the clerk's table.

The House of Representatives will be called to order by the Speaker at 12 o'clock.

The Marine Band will be in attendance.

The Senate will assemble at 12 o'clock, and immediately after prayer will proceed to the hall of the House of Representatives.

The Diplomatic Corps will meet at 11:30, in Representatives' Lobby, and be conducted by the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House to the seats assigned them.

The President of the Senate will occupy the Speaker's chair.

The Speaker of the House will occupy a seat at the left of the President of the Senate.

The Chaplains of the Senate and of the House will occupy seats next to the presiding officers of their respective houses.

The Chairman of the Joint Committee of Arrangements will occupy seats at the right and left of the orator, and next to them will be seated the Secretary of the Senate and Clerk of the House.

The other officers of the Senate and of the House will occupy seats on the floor at the right and the left of the Speaker's platform.

Prayer will be offered by the Rev. F. D. Power, Chaplain of the House of Representatives.

The presiding officer will then present the orator of the day.

The benediction will be pronounced by the Rev. J. J. Bullock, Chaplain of the Senate.

By reason of the limited capacity of the galleries, the number of tickets is necessarily restricted.

No person will be admitted to the capitol except on presentation of a ticket which will be good only for the place indicated.

The architect of the capitol the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate and the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House are charged with the execution of these arrangements.

THE LUCASES.

Sketch of the Founder of This Noted St. Louis Family.

John B. C. Lucas—James H. Lucas—The Lucas Estate—Biographical Incidents.

The late Judge John B. C. Lucas, the founder of the family in America, was born in Normandy, France, in the year 1758, and died in St. Louis, August 31, 1842, aged 84 years. He came to the United States about 1784; after spending a few weeks in Philadelphia, started for the West, and settled on the "Allegheny," six miles back of Pittsburg, farming here for twenty-five years. During that period he was returned to Congress from his district. In 1805 President Jefferson sent him to Missouri to pass upon the land claims of those who held or claimed under the former governments of Spain and France. His associates were Penrose and Donaldson. He brought with him to Missouri his wife, sons—Charles, William, Adrian, James H., and daughter Anne, who became Anne L. Hunt. Charles died in 1817, Adrian next. William, 1836; James H., 1873, and Anne Lucas Hunt in 1879, she being the last of these two generations. He was educated in France, and came to America a thorough read lawyer. All those who were contemporaneous with him, accord to him talents of the very highest order, and an integrity beyond question or doubt; his manners were those of an elegantly refined gentleman, high or low were always met with a suavity at once graceful and agreeable. It may be truly said he was a victim of calamities, having lost out of six sons, five by unnatural deaths. These terrible events doubtless went far to influence his later life, and to account for his withdrawal from all social intercourse. But few minds could have survived such dreadful experences and retained anything of its original force; his did, it was powerful to the last. The foregoing sketch has an object that is to show the fallacy of memory of some men who, to glorify themselves as "old inhabitants" talk falsely and glibly of past events in the history of men and things. Referring to your issue of January 30, fourth column fourth page, your reporter relates an interview had with a prominent citizen, as follows: "I have frequently heard the story that Dorris won the block on Eleventh and Olive streets, which goes by his name from old Mr. J. B. Lucas, the father of James H. I believe it is true. Lucas was very fond of gambling, and would sit down to poker whenever he could get a party. A number of us went up the river a good many years ago, and in the party were J. B. C. Lucas, Luther M. Kennett, who was Mayor of the city at the time, and Dorriss. A poker game was organized with these three among the players. Well, Kennett got a good hand and bet it all against Lucas. Kennett won $700 during the evening from Lucas, who didn't mind the loss at all, etc., etc."

I have quoted thus freely from your article with a view to show the facility with which some old "residents" relate facts and incidents that never existed or occurred—in common parlance, lie.

The steamboat excursion referred to happened in 1852 and was on the occasion of breaking ground at Hannibal of the H. & St. Joe railroad. I was one of the St. Louis delegation and was on the boat that night and saw all. Your informant asserts he saw J. B. C. Lucas, the father of James H., at cards with Kennett. The old Judge, father of James H., so positively identified, died August, 31, 1842, some ten years anterior to the steamboat excursion, which renders it quite improbable that he was "seeing poker" that evening. Gen. Dorries was not on that boat.

JAMES H. LUCAS,

the last surviving son of J. B. C. Lucas, was born November 12, 1800, on the Allegheny, six miles back of Pittsburg, and died at St. Louis, November 9, 1873, was buried in Calvary cemetery on his birth day, November 12. He came to St. Louis with his father in 1805 a very sprightly boy of five years old. His disposition for fun and mischief was exuberant, which did not quite suit the taste of the old gentleman, so that, at about the age of sixteen, the father, with the view to tone down the youngster's spirits, sent him to school in New Hampshire, supposing that the steady habits of that latitude would influence the boy. But it was no go. The peculiarities of those people were intolerable to him. After enduring for a year or so, he resolved to quit and try life on his own hook. So, writing to his father in a "Declaration of Independence," he put out. Traveling nearly due west he came to and stopped at the town of Poughkeepsie, Dutchess county, N. Y. Here he immediately entered the office of Elisha Williams, at that time the leading lawyer of New York, and began the study of the law, meanwhile teaching French to eke out expenses. This, however, did not last long. His roving spirit would not brook delay. Again packing his kit he starts for Arkansas and brings up at the "Post." Here he was so fortunate as to win the esteem and friendship of Mr. Notrebe, a very elegant, refined and cultivated French gentleman, a leading merchant and a planter at the Post. This friendship lasted through life. Upon reaching this, his last destination, he resumed his law-reading, and, while acquiring a profession, taught school, evincing an energy and determination seldom manifested by a lad of 18 years. While pursuing his studies he was made county clerk. Soon after having obtained his license as a lawyer, he began to "ride the circuit." The extent of his practice is unknown to me, but it must have paid, for he soon married, and next we find him a planter. This was his life down to 1836, when his father, finding himself alone, William having died that year, wrote, requesting him to remove to St. Louis, with which he complied in 1837. From his advent to St. Louis until his death in 1873, he was identified with all of the leading projects, having in view the extention beautifying and improvement of the city, and was among the foremost of public spirited men when schemes to benefit the whole community were suggested. He, O'Fallon and Page, were the trio who subscribed the first $100,000 to the Missouri Pacific Railroad—this about 1850 and 1851.

THE LUCAS ESTATE

extended from the east side of Fourth street, west to Jefferson avenue, St. Charles street on the north and Market street on the south, the heart of St. Louis. When he took charge in 1837 there were not one hundred houses in the district. Look at it now. Public and private buildings counted by the thousand bear ample testimony of the liberal policy of the proprietors inviting all to come in, aiding and encouraging improvements, and themselves building houses by the hundred. In his social relations he was kindly, gentle and affectionate, one of the most approachable of men—a magnanimous auditor, for out of the hundreds of trusts and mortgages he held on property sold, not to exceed five were ever forcibly closed, and these generally at the request of the debtor. His charities were liberal, unostentatious—I may say, secret. Take him all in all, his character was beautiful. He died in the day of his usefulness deeply regretted by this community. These are the two men whose memories are stigmatized by certain old residents—mental vagabonds rather—who walk our streets licking up every defamatory item of gossip, stowing it away in their mean scuts for future use, and when opportunity offers palming them off on "innocent reporters" as facts of their own knowledge. As an illustration of this base habit, look at the short dialogue as given in your issue of January 30, page 4, fifth column, to-wit:

Reporter—"The Dorries Row on Olive street. I believe that was won in a night, wasn't it?"

Old Resident answers: "Yes; Gen. Dorriss won that of J. B. C. Lucas on three nines, and to this day among the gambling fraternity three nines are known as a "Lucas." Here the slanderer answers unequivocally "Yes," without the grace to qualify by saying I have heard so and so.

The following facts and figures most conclusively show that there never was a word of truth in the tale of the three nines. Referring to the records of St. Louis county: (see book A, page 85, February 7, 1849.) Deed of James H. Lucas and Anne L. Hunt to John Cavender for 49 7-12 feet on north side of Olive and west of Eleventh. Again, same book and page, date February 12, 1849: E. C. Hutchinson to John Cavender, 80 8 12 feet on north side Olive in block 506. Book O. 5, page 278. December 18, 1849. Deed of Lucas Hunt to Edward A. Meany, of Chicot county, Ark., for 75 feet on north side of Olive street, in block 56. These three deeds embraced the entire 205 feet covered by the Dorris Row. Gen Dorris became a resident of St. Louis in 1868. Just about nineteen years after Lucas and Hunt had ceased to own a foot of the ground, Gen. Dorris purchased of Wayman Crow, and, if the tale of three nines is to be maintained and repeated, I respectfully refer old residents to Mr. Crow for further information, as he was the last owner of the premises before Dorriss. This exposition may deprive the smart "ten cent ante" fellows of a standard joke, and cause "old residents" to cease their lying.

ANNE LUCAS HUNT,

the only daughter, was born near Pittsburg, September, 1796; came to St. Louis with her father in 1805, then in her ninth year a bright, precocious child. Education at that early day was a difficult matter to attain. There being no first-class schools, no colleges or convents, the young folks were dependent upon home instructions, and these varied according to the abilities of parents. Our heroine was more fortunate than most of her companions in having a father of genius and high classical attainments and a well educated sensible mother. From these she mainly obtained such culture and knowledge as enabled her to appear to advantage in cultivated and intelligent society. Her career as a belle was short, for in her eighteenth year she married Capt. Theodore Hunt, formerly of the United States Navy; this in 1814. He died in '32. Afterwards in 1836 she married, Wilson P. Hunt, who died in April 1842. About this time, her life became one of systematic benevolence, seeking out the poor, the suffering and afflicted. While administering to their wants she sought more extended fields for her charities, and appropriated largely of her estate to endow and build up societies, orders and institutions for the relief of the poor, and the extension of good morals. The tale of misery and suffering always touched her heart and opened her hand. She saw the vicious of both sexes becoming daily more numerous and more degraded; she also saw the world condemning, but doing little to alleviate or reclaim.

Mr. Editor, I feel that I would trespass too far upon your army of twenty thousand daily subscribers were I to go into a detail of the very many noble bequests of this remarkable lady. I will mention but one, to-wit: "The Convent of the Good Shepherd," founded by her in the interests of fallen humanity—an institution con parabely spending in its infancy, containing to-day within its walls four hundred and seventy-five souls—a vast multitude. Who can analyze its moral and vicious composition, ranging from the highest type of angelic virtue down to the most degraded habits of vice? Monuments of marble and bronze are erected in memory of and to perpetuate the name and fame of those who have done great things in their day, and are intended to excite admiration and invite imitation, but they are silent. Not so this monument; the prayers and aspirations of these four hundred and seventy-five beings daily ascend to heaven beseeching God's blessings on their generous foundress, who for all time has provided them a home, where, secure from the anxiety and temptations of the world, they may recover a self respect, abandoning the life of sin, and once more placing themselves in the line of God, favor. Therefore, so long as sinful women shall exist on earth, this monument will speak, and she who, disregarding earthly values gave freely of her substance will be called "blessed of women."

The Receiver Has Received in Winding Up $93,000,

Leaving About $661 for the Poor Policy Holders—The Science of Life Insurance Wrecking Exemplified.

When Judge Horner was sitting a few days since upon evidence in support of attorneys' and referees' claims on the slumbering Mutual Life Insurance estate, he called upon Receiver Bent to furnish "for the information of the court" a statement of fees paid already. The following summary was accordingly furnished:

ATTORNEYS' FEES.

Frank J. Bowman	$ 4,500 00
Vernon Knapp	2,400 00
David Wagner	500 00
McComass McKeighan	7,900 00

Total unpaid fees for services, attorneys and referees	$11,400 00

The sources of the Mutual's income from the time that operations commenced upon the wreck, February 7, 1877, have been as follows:

RECEIPTS.

Furniture and fixtures	252 15
	$81,097 78
Balance in hand of receiver December 31, 1881	$12,061 68

If the balance in hand of the receiver as per above summary should be applied to payment of the unpaid fees, $11,400, the sublime result of five years' winding up would present the neat sum of $661 68 for distribution among the policy-holders.

The Mutual attorneys, however, are confident that sooner or later they can recover sufficient to the estate for payment of about ten per cent of the million dollar indebtedness. A judgment was recovered against Director J. C. Priest for about $11,000, which remains to be realized, representing moneys received for assenting to the transfer and reinsurance contract—Mutual to Mound City. Judge Lindley has in his court the suit against the Lewis estate, on a like claim, for about $30,000. The fund in court, proceeds of sale of the Columbia Building upon which the Mutual's lien was established will, in further part, be applied to the Mutual estate. Meanwhile the expenses are going on, however, and in the light of the past, the future presents no great promise for the unfortunate creditors.

Another magnificent audience assembled last night to witness Mr. Booth's great performance of Bertuccio, in Tom Taylor's version of the wonderfully dramatic story of "Rigoletto." The character is very melodramatic in tone, and permits of many effects which are peculiarly strong and vividly contrasted. The audience was most enthusiastic, and Mr. Booth was called before the curtain at the end of each act. Miss Bella Pateman was very fine as Fiordelisa. The balance of the cast was good in all particulars. To-night Mr. Booth appears as Iago in "Othello." "Hamlet" will be repeated at the matinee to-morrow, and this great engagement will close with "The Merchant of Venice," which will be presented to-morrow night.

The Strakosch Opera Company gave a most attractive concert at the Pickwick Theater last evening, and the numbers were beautifully rendered. The concert will be repeated to-morrow afternoon with a change of programme.

The last two days of the performances of Gen. Tom Thumb and company are announced and the chances are for a very brilliant closing of their stay in St. Louis. Parents can afford their little ones no better treat than to take them to see this charming entertainment.

The entertainment at the Pickwick Theater, for the benefit of Trinity Episcopal Church, which takes place on Monday evening, will be a very grand affair, and will fittingly close a very brilliant season. The programme will be a most attractive one, embracing the elements of music, tableaux, pantomime, etc., and there will be a number of fancy booths attended by ladies in costume. The audience will undoubtedly be a splendid one.

Oscar Wilde is already becoming the town talk, and as the time approaches for the appearance of the distinguished æsthete in St. Louis the inquiry for seats to hear his lecture on "English Renaissance" has been remarkable. The sale, however, will not open until Tuesday next, when a clean sheet of the Mercantile Library Hall will be presented and the first comers will have the choice. While Mr. Wilde is in St. Louis he will be most cordially entertained in social circles, and whatever his peculiarities may be, he certainly will be an object of great interest to cultured and artistic people. The charge of admission to his lecture will be $1 50, and $1 for reserved seats.

A Remarkable Letter.

The appended letter is from a man of considerable genius, a nephew of Gen. Ben. Butler; at one time the holder of an important government appointment, and whose marriage with Rose Eytinge, the actress, attracted a great deal of attention at the time. This was George H. Butler, who is now confined in a lunatic asylum, and was written by him to his tailor:

November 12, 1881.

Mr. Moser:

DEAR SIR—The coat came, after negotiation enough to have negotiated an extradition treaty with Prince Bismarck to restore fugitive Germans from the Landsturn to Hesse Cassel, Darmstadt, Mecklenburg and Schleswig-Holstein. The material is tony; looks as though it would wear longer than Jim Blaine will have office and fits like a Jouvin glove around the neck and shoulders. A half dozen crazy lieutenants in the Navy and three army captains of cavalry not too crazy to talk about clothes burst into hurrahs of admiration when they saw how the coat fitted in on the shoulders. If our army and navy would take as much pains to pad out their brains as they do their shoulders they would be more useful in peace as well as in war.

But I must hasten to the painful denouement. When I came to button the overcoat the trouble began. It would hardly meet. I can't go through the world wearing it open and catching cold in the belly. I won't send it by the wagon driver, for he is a careless brute and might use it for a carriage robe. Monday I'll bring it in my buggy or Uncle Sam's buggy. What is his is mine and we'll consult how to remedy the matter. Cutter was drunk again, wasn't he? Hoard up my orders on Koubiass, I mean the weekly ones, until the coat is wearable as well as saleable.

Yours, GEO. H. BUTLER.

Cheapness of Chinese Labor.

From the New York Times.

Everybody talks about Chinese labor and its exceeding cheapness, and does this in a vague sort of way, as the actual money the artisan or workman receives in China is not well understood. In the consular reports printed by the Department of State Mr. Denney gives us the cost of skilled artisans, agriculturists and workmen in that wonderful country. In the higher departments of art a painter may make his name immortal, but he hardly works for money, it is rather for fame. No matter how much his productions are in demand he is no better off in worldly goods than his butcher. In what is called skilled labor a master may make $156 a year and his workman $78. A woman who is very proficient can earn $26 a year. Wages, if low, bear, however, a proper proportion to cost of living. If a master workman can make $156 a year, he can support his family for $120, and with a diminished scale of expenses the working man keeps his family during the same time for $65. In agricultural labor wages are even lower, though the profits made out of the land are not, after all, so very small. Mr. Denny cited a family of man and wife and two young children who till a plot of land of some two and one-half acres. The cost of maintaining the family is calculated at twenty cents a day. The land being worth $400, the total expenses of making the crop would be $62, to which must be added the food of the family, a total outlay of $135. The value of the product being $160, the profit would be $25. Cotton seems to give a better result, two and a half acres making a profit of $33. A woman will spin all day for six cents, and a weaver will work a week for sixty cents. Farm laborers are content with $1 03 a week during harvest time, but by the year will hire for from $1 50 to $2 a month. A laboring man who can save from $3 to $4 a year does fairly well. In the shipping ports the coolies make better wages, and earn $4 50 a month. When in the interior they are carmen and boatmen they make much lower wages. A very strong man, who will carry on his back a load of from 300 to 400 pounds, gains 25 cents a day. An ordinary coolie's account Mr. Denny makes out as follows: Monthly receipts, $4 50; expenses, $4; net income, 50 cents. The marvelous cheapness of labor cannot be better shown than when coal mining in China is examined. From the pit's mouth coal can be furnished at $1 a ton, with a profit to the owner of the mine. According to an official statement, a Chinese soldier costs the Government 50 taels, or $67, a year. There does not seem to be any great difference between the cost of Chinese and Japanese labor. Consul-General Van Buren, of Japan, states that the wages of an able-bodied farm-hand are $35 a year with board, or $50 without board. A stout, healthy woman will hire for the year with food for from $8 to $10 or from $25 to $30 without board.

A Boston Girl's Whim.

From the Sioux City Journal.

For the past seven months there has been living within the Omahas, thirty miles below this city, an educated young lady—a Boston lady, too—who is for a time a member of the tribe, because she hopes in this way to learn something of the inner life of this, the oldest tribe, except the Pawnees, in this part of the West. This lady, Miss A. C. Fletcher, was in the city on Tuesday with Dr. Wilkinson, agent of the Omahas and Winnebagos. The agent says that on taking charge of the Omahas a few weeks ago he found this lady with them and nearly starved. Miss Fletcher is a brunette, solidly built, about twenty-five years old, rather good-looking, and, with a directness of speech and a way of standing silent while irrelevant conversation is going on that probably comes from her present mode of life. Miss Fletcher intimated to Dr. Wilkinson that before coming to the Omahas she had been with some of the warlike Northern tribes, and from her present place of study she would go to the New Mexico Pueblos, thence to the Flatheads of Washington Territory, and return East by way of the Sioux country.

The House Commerce Committee on Thursday reported favorably the bill to authorize the Mercer County Bridge Company to construct a bridge across the Mississippi River at Keithsburg, Ill.

Gladstone entered the House of Commons on Thursday and eloquently defened the Irish policy of the Government. The supremacy of the British parliament must be maintained; the country cannot give Ireland what it cannot give Scotland.

The House on Thursday, by a vote of 162 to 104, decided that the total membership of that body for the next ten years, unless it shall be increased by the admission of new states shall be fixed at 325. With a few exceptions Democratic members voted solidly against the proposition.

New York anti-monopolists are after the scalp of Leland Stanford's brother, who has been nominated by the Republicans to succeed Webster Wagner in the State Senate. They say that if the Democrats nominate a good man they will support him. If they do not a straight anti-monopolist ticket will be put in the field.

W. Fisk's Jubilee Singers were refused accommodation by eighteen Washington hotels on Thursday night. A meeting at one of the churches was addressed by Fred. Douglass and the Rev. Dr. Ranken in reference to the matter. Douglass said that the singers were refused at the hotels in Springfield, Ill., last spring, and that when President Garfield heard of it he telegraphed them, saying that should such an outrage occur in Washington while he lived at the White House they would find its doors open to them.

The eighth annual pageant of the Knights of Momus at New Orleans, on Thursday night, illustrated the great Hindoo poem of Ramiagara, by Sage Vaimiki, one of the most ancient literary works in existence. The poem relates the adventures of the hero Rama, the incarnation of Vishnu, his marriage with Sita, her abduction by Ravana, the two-headed giant and King of Ceylon, and Rama's war against the giant, assisted by the Vanors or monkey tribes. There were sixteen magnificent tableaux mounted on cars.

Congressman Horr submitted a written report on Thursday on the subject, and regarding the proposition to reduce the salary of Senators and representatives from $5,000 to $4,000. Among other things he said: "At a lower rate of compensation we fear that Congress would soon be made up of the wealthy, and of men of small mental caliber, and of men who have no families—the old bachelors of the country. Would it be safe to confine the law-making power of the government to these classes?" As to the last-named class, while there are many single men who are worthy of the highest confidence, we are firm in the belief that no premium should be offered to this mistaken manner of life.

A Dead Letter Ordinance.

The police have awakened to the necessity of enforcing a city ordinance which has been almost a dead letter. A section of the city ordinances reads as follows: "The owners, or agents, or occupiers of tenements and vacant lots owned by them, under their charge, or occupied by them, shall keep the sidewalk and gutters in front of and adjoining their property clean, and also all the private alleys in the rear of, or adjoining the property owned by them clean to the center of such alley, and after any fall of snow, to cause the snow to be immediately removed from the sidewalk fronting their respective lots into the carriage way of the street. Any person failing to comply with the requirements of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof be fined not less than $5 nor more than $25."

To-day several cases of violations of this ordinance were docketed in the police courts. In many parts of the city the difference in the depth of mud on the streets and on the sidewalks is very small, and it is to remedy this that the ordinance was passed and the police resolved to enforce the provisions.

CATTLE—The demand for fair to good native butcher stock was quite large while the supply was scant, not enough to go around. The few bunches offered sold steadily at very strong prices. Interior shippers were ruled out of the market altogether for want of stock. There were a few car loads of medium shipping steers in the pens which were slow of disposal. New York has a light run and reported as dull, therefore had the supply in our market proven large, would have been dull. Stock cattle dull. Feeding steers scarce and wanted. Ruling quotations steady.

A BORDER ROMANCE.

The Homicidal Influences of the Late War.

A Southwest Missouri Family of Killers.

From the New York Times.

There are in the South, and more particularly in the border states, where the war divided the people into enemies of the neighborhood and even of the household, and gave to their strife the atmosphere of private vendetta and individual murder, rather than of border war, in which personal hatred was merged in the mass, numbers of families, whose members might take for a motto the boast of Jacques Frochard in "The Two Orphans"—"I come from a family that kills." The disregard for human life, which had been too common among the rude and violent communities before the war, was intensified by four years of bloodshed, and hatreds, which were engendered by the cruelties of guerrilla warfare, in which neighbor lay in wait for neighbor in the brush, and when bands of bushwhackers alternately swept to and fro, murdering, burning and raiding, remained to be perpetuated for years of strife and alternating murder, and may in some cases be continued for generations. There are vendettas of this sort which are still being carried on in the wilder regions of Kentucky, Tennessee, and Arkansas, and the legacy of bloodthirstiness, and even a sort of emulation in homicide, inherited by the young generation, who were children when it took place, still remains. One of the sections that suffered most from guerrilla warfare was southwest Missouri. The red hills, the narrow valleys and thin woods of the Ozark uplands were a thorough debatable land, easily traveled, yet apt for concealment, its shut-in valleys inviting surprises and ambuscades, the trails hard to find and harder to keep, with a scattered population, and only on rare occasions occupied by a commanding force on either side. It was nominally held by the Union forces after the defeat of the Confederates at Pea Ridge, and there were usually garrison detachments at Springfield, at Neosho, and even as far south as Bentonville, Ark. But they were compelled to be on the alert for retreat, and were swept out of the country more than once before an advance of "Old Pap" Price Marmaduke, or Shelby. When they held their place they by no means occupied the country, and there were guerrilla bands on both sides that never left it, and who fought and ambushed each other continually, and by their combined destruction, swept off every hoof and horn, burned every house, except in the garrisoned towns, and left the country at the end of the war a wilderness, where the wolves howled and which human beings had deserted. It would be difficult to realize this in the thriving and populous development which has come to Southwest Missouri with the opening of railroads, the development of lead mines, and the immigration, which has been attracted by the fine climate and fertile soil, and in the lively towns and embryo cities, with a large element of Northern population, their schools, churches, and all the evidences of peaceful civilization, there is little evidence of the savagery which was created by the war, and which would more naturally be expected to survive in the slack waters and eddies of the stream of progress in the unpenetrated regions of Kentucky and Tennessee. But the element of ferocity is still there among the aboriginal inhabitants, and it was in this region that the family grew up whose deeds are about to be related, and which owe it to the distinction claimed by Jacques Frochard. The story is perhaps the more interesting beyond its typical features because it is connected with a tragedy in the life of a young lady who is known to a wide public as one of the "queens of the arena."

The family, or at least the killing members of it, consisted of four brothers—Jacob, Benjamin, Jasper and Thomas Killian. The elder, Jake Killian, had served in one of the guerrilla bands on the Union side during the war, and, young as he was, had acquired an evil reputation for treachery and savagery. His courage then and always was doubtful, unless when stimulated with whisky; but he had been shot at so many times and taken part in so many affrays that he had become in a sort familiarized to it, as a bully acquires confidence through frequent fistic encounters. When his ugliness was inflamed with sod-corn whisky he was both quarrelsome and desperate. He had but one eye, the other having been shot out during a game of cards in which, a dispute having arisen, there was a prompt appeal to Navy revolvers across the table, and Jake lost his eye and his opponent his life. His appearance was impressed on me in a vivid manner by being hailed by him on the stumbling board sidewalk of the town of Neosho one summer afternoon, and having to face the terrors of his ugly eye when he was looking for a quarrel. If one desires to test himself in a sudden call on the nerve, I do not know of any more trying occasion than to have to meet the eye of a human tiger of this sort, without even a jacknife for a weapon, and shift off the perilous imminence of attack without being cowed or inflamed into provoking the shot; and I am free to say that I don't know that I should have stood it but that I saw out of the corner of my eye, through the open door of the wooden bank building, the cashier, with a long pistol that was ready to his hand, cover Jacob from across the counter, and stand ready for the first movement of his hand toward his hip. Possibly Jake saw it, too, for he turned past and went his way with a curse. It was but an instant, but the vividness of the negative that was taken on my mind has never faded, and I can see the savage, beardless countenance, the baleful eye, the hideous scar where the other was wanting; the tall, gaunt, and muscular figure, clad in blue-jeans of a somewhat dandy fashion, with black velvet collar and cuffs, the slouched hat and tall boots, and the unpaved and gullied street, the row of frontier stores, the horses and mules hitched to the posts, the prairie schooner turning the corner, and all the features of the scene as though it were before me. I can hear the ring of the bells on his spurs as he stepped away, and experience the sense of relief to the sudden and sharp tension. It was but a few months before that Jake Killian had performed the exploit of killing the proprietor of a circus in the middle of his own tent and getting away unharmed. He was then on bail for the murder, and in one of the stages of the law's delay, which made a travesty of justice in his case, and his homicidal reputation was at its highest pitch.

The affair had taken place in the neighboring town of Granby, to which the lead mines attracted the worst sort of the population. It is not easy to imagine anything more desperately forbidding than such a place. The town of rude cabins lies scattered over barren flint hills, without the slightest pretense to regularity, or even any ways for travel except foot-paths. There are a few stores on the single street, and saloons that look positively deadly in their dark and grimy doorways. The tall chimney of the smelting furnace pours out a cloud of poisonous leaden smoke that, swept by the prevailing wind against the opposite hillside, has intensified its barrenness by a blue deposit. The stream in the valley runs thick and turbid with the washings of the red soil. In every direction hillocks are surmounted by rude windlasses by which men are lifting tubs of ore, or which are hollowed by the shafts of exhausted mines. The population is mostly of the aboriginal inhabitants—for the sinking of a shaft for a pocket of lead requires neither skill nor capital, and the corporation owning the tract prefers to make its profit from smelting—and naturally of the rudest, most violent and reckless. They mined with pistols in their belts, and at night gambled and drank in the dens that afforded their only amusement. Money was plenty, and it was an attractive place for the circusses, of which one or two in a year would pass through the country, although there was almost the certainty of a row.

On a night in May the dingy and weather-stained tent of the circus of William Lake was set up in an open space in the town. It was clear and calm, and the bright moon of the southwest cast a softening glow on even the barren hills and rude cabins. The flaring kerosene torch sent up its smoky flame at the entrance to the tent, whose dingy walls were glowing with the light within. Horses and mules were hitched about, and the audience were dropping out of the doorway, noisy and talkative. Suddenly there crowded out a tall man, with a smoking pistol in his hand, who ran to his mule, unhitched it from the scrub, bounded into the saddle, and dashed away with a whoop and a flourish of his pistol, recklessly riding among the open shafts and in a moment gaining the open prairie, across which he galloped for the timber. There was no pursuit, although some tumult and excitement, and the murderer was gone. Within, the audience hastened down from the benches and gathered around a burly man, in his shirt sleeves, who was lying on the ground painfully struggling with his breath, and on whose breast a stain of blood was marked. He was taken up by the performers and helpers, and borne into the dressing-room, where his wife, in the costume of an equestrienne, took his head in her lap, and a young girl in the spangles and muslin of a ring fairy stood by in tears and terror. The wound was a fatal one, and in a few minutes the powerful man's breath was choked, and he struggled convulsively in giving up his life. William Lake, the murdered man, was well known as a circus proprietor in the West. He kept a floating show on the Mississippi in the later period of the war, and afterwards traveled a circuit in the southwest. He was bold and rough, as he had need to be in his profession, but not without kindly qualities. Mrs. Lake was an accomplised rider and a woman of equal courage and spirit. She afterward married William Hickock, known throughout the West as Wild Bill, and who not long since was treacherously shot at Deadwood. The young girl who had this baptism of blood in her profession, was Emma Lake, now known as one of the most accomplished in the manege of the equestriennes of the arena. Mrs. Lake offered a large reward for the capture of the murderer, which was also supplemented by small amounts by the state and county. Killian remained in the "bush" for several months, fed and sheltered by his kindred and friends, and when the excitement and indignation had subsided, was delivered up by his friends, who claimed and received a portion of the reward, which it was supposed was used in the payment of his legal expenses. He was admitted to bail on an indictment for murder in the second degree, provocation having been claimed, as he shot Lake because the latter had ordered him out in consequence of a refusal to supply him with a ticket for the second part of the performance. The case dragged along in the courts on motions for changes of venue and various delays, and came to an impotent conclusion, Killian being as unrestrained and dangerous as ever, and on one occasion, while he was still under indictment, visiting the circus, which was continued for some time by the widow of his victim.

The second notable exploit to enhance the reputation of the family was performed by the third son, Jasper Killian. It was a more cowardly and mercenary murder, and ultimately fatal to the assassin. One cold February day a farmer came riding into Neosho, having in his hand a black velvet cap, which he had picked up by the ashes of a camp fire near the creek. It was recognized as being like one worn by a young man named Frank Wright, of rather reckless and dissolute character, who made his living by smuggling whisky into the adjoining Indian nation. He had been about town the day previous, had bought a barrel of whisky and in the evening had started out with it in a team belonging to and in company with Jasper Killian. Suspicion of foul play was aroused and parties rode out to the dead camp fire. There were some stains of blood on the ground, but not more than might have accompanied the cooking of fresh meat. A close search, however, resulted in the finding of a piece of bone, which a doctor declared to have belonged to the skull of a man. With all the promptness of the southwest parties were organized for pursuit, and men "good with their hands," departed in the welcome excitement of a man-hunt. It was supposed that the murderer would have made his way into the Indian Territory, the ready refuge of the villains and fugitives of the border, but this proved to be an error, and was the occasion of several days' respite for the assassin. Returning disappointed the road was taken to the hoem of the Killians, near Granby, then only inhabited by the old man and old woman and the youngest son, a half-imbecile boy. The wagon was found bearing marks of blood partially washed out, and it was ascertained that the day previous Jasper had been endeavoring to sell a watch like Wright's in Granby. No signs were found of the murderer or the body about the house. The track of the wagon was followed back to the mouth of a deserted shaft, almost solitary on the prairie, and it was determined to search this. It was a wild scene as we rode up. The sky was dull and leaden, and the cold wind that swept across the barren prairie, covered with a thin crust of snow like the frosting of a cake, was penetratingly damp and chill. A savage crowd was grouped about. They had built a fire of boughs that smoked and steamed rather than gave warmth, and physical discomfort added to the vindictiveness of illtemper. They had brought out the old man and exhausted threats in the endeavor to make him reveal the whereabouts of his son, of which he was undoubtedly ignorant. There he stood by the fire, dwarfish, ignorant, and degraded, in ragged and grimy garments, an old slouch hat pulled down over his uneasy, ferret eyes, nervously chewing tobacco, but otherwise apparently impassive to any feeling or fear. He never once looked toward the shaft, on whose mound men were at work with ropes and grappling-irons. Several boughs of trees were drawn up and then there was a cry, "He's got him!" A vigorous young man, who had been handling the irons, was drawn up with his face pale and his hands and garments stained and wet, and then a chill—stirred through the crowd as slowly appeared a naked corpse, with the hook caught at the knee, and dripping and muddy from its foul sepulchre. There was a gaping, purple wound in the forehead, where an axe had done its work, and it was apparent that the murderer had brained his victim at the camp-fire, stripped the body and placed in a wagon, and driven to the mouth of the shaft and cast it in. It was a dangerous sort of crowd when the body was drawn up, and for a moment or two it was a question whether the old man would not have his firmness or knowledge tried by the question of a rope. But he was obviously ignorant, and finally the crowd trooped off to town, leaving him to make his way home. Parties were organized for the pursuit and the country was hunted over in every direction for a circuit of more than a hundred miles. Two of the most determined struck the trail of the murderer, and followed it to the town of Marshfield, 160 miles. They found that a man resembling Killian had purchased cartridges for his pistol, and traced him to the den of a pariah woman, such as infest occasionally the hamlets of the West and South. Just at dusk they burst in the door and found him sitting by the smouldering fire with his head in the lap of his Delilah. He sprang up, and had his pistol half drawn when a bullet crashed into his brain.

"Colder than the rude and ruffian air"

The events by which the other two sons vindicated the fame of the family may be told more briefly. Ben's exploit was almost an exact imitation of that of his elder brother. He got into a dispute with a negro at a circus in Granby, and there was a prompt appeal to pistols. Neither, unfortunately, was killed, but the bullet struck one of the innocent spectators, a respectable store-keeper, who tumbled from his seat, a victim to the danger of attending a circus in Granby, almost as perilous as witnessing a battle. It was evident from the position of the combatants that the bullet must have come from Ben Killian's pistol, but he also escaped the penalty of the law by the tough swearing of his friends. Ben was lame, but from the number of his fights and shooting affrays was considered the most dangerous of the family. The fourth son, Tom, who was not full-witted and not of age when he committed his murder, did so with the avowed purpose of imitating his brothers in killing his man. He procured a pistol and went to the cabin of a neighboring farmer who lived alone. He found him sitting on the stoop reading the county newspaper. He walked up to him, deliberately produced his pistol and shot him through the head. After taking his watch and ransacking the house he went as deliberately home again. There was no difficulty in discovering the murderer, and this time justice was strong enough to secure a verdict of imprisonment for life, and a short time ago the last of the Killian family was consigned to the Missouri Penitentiary.

The story is a painful one, and in no degree above the level of a record of degrading and brutal ferocity, but it is not exceptional in its type, although extraordinary, and the observer who studies the result of the war should not omit the examples of this sort of recklessness and savagery among a rude and primitive people which were engendered by it. The case of the Killian family might very likely be more than paralleled in the border States, but it is the only one I know in which every male member of a family was a murderer, and as such it has been set down in an actual record of facts.

A Horrible Tale.

Rock Rapids (Ia.) Special Dispatch.

There are new developments in the testimony before the Coroner's jury at Sibley on the murder of John Lanahan. Anna, daughter of the murdered man, confessed to-day that Maggie, her oldest sister, did the shooting of her father, and that she (Anna) afterwards went out doors and broke the light of glass to make it appear that the shot was fired through the window from the outside. A young man named Birch is under arrest on suspicion as accessory to the crime. Public opinion is that further developments will implicate the wife of the murdered man. At the Coroner's inquest to-day Maggie, the oldest daughter, confessed to the shooting of her father Saturday night. She also implicated her mother, her sister and Anna's lover, Birch. Maggie says it was agreed between them all to put the old man out of the way. Birch furnished the revolver, which the old woman kept hid for six weeks previous to the murder, waiting for a chance. Lanahan had just returned from a farmer's club-meeting, and was about to sit down and read, when Maggie stepped behind him and fired, killing him instantly. She then arranged the body in a way so as to appear as if some one shot him through the window, while her younger sister (Anna) went out and broke the window. The old lady then took the revolver and hid it in the hen-house, where it was found to-day in accordance with Maggie's statement. Birch is in jail in this place, and the old woman and two girls will be brought over from Riverview, where they are now in custody. Great excitement now prevails, and Birch is fearful that the people will lynch him. Maggie was living at Lemars when the conspiracy was formed to kill their father, and her mother, sister, and this man Birch, not having sand enough to kill themselves, sent for Maggie to do the job, which she did.

OPPORTUNITY.

I.

I heard a tap upon my garden door,
And ope'd it, eager to the morning air.
Methought, mayhap, young Love stands waiting there,
And sang the thought in rupture o'er and o'er.
But a half anger shook my pulses sore,
To see, not glorious Love, O strong and fair!
But a small child with sunny, gleaming hair,
And wistful eyes filled with the violet's love.
He smiled into my face and stepped more near,
And held out pleading hands; but in my pain
And disappointment I—I did not heed,
But shut the door. I saw the look of fear
That crossed the sweet, child-like face; I saw the tear—
And then I stood alone in bitter rain.

II.

Now often in the wet I watch all pay,
Beside the open door for little feet,
For the dusk violet eyes, and smiling sweet
Of my child guest, whom once I turned away.
'Mid Summer's sun-gold roses; 'mid the gray,
And chill, and mist of Autumn; in the heat
Of drowsy August; in the ice and sleet
Of winter—day and night I watch and pray.
He comes no more. I have not seen his face
Since that far day, when on his childish grace
I looked with angry eyes. Ah me! ah me!
I have atoned for that brief, careless sin.
I have atoned for my uncharity—
For, since Love hath not pleaded to come in.

BLOOD-STAINED TREASURE.

An Ohio Community Which Believes Implicitly in Ghosts.

Youngstown (O.) Cor. Cincinnati Enquirer.

In the side of a ravine near the village of Mount Nebo, ten miles south of this city, is a cave which is an object of horror to the superstitious and of peculiar interest to the adventurously inclined. One night twenty years ago, so the story goes, two men sought shelter in the cave from a blinding snowstorm. One was a simple minded old peddler who for years supplied the farm-houses in the vicinity with his wares, which he carried in a pack upon his back. The other was a friend whom he had long known and whom he had met an hour before, belated like himself and seeking shelter from the storm. Once in the cave a blazing fire was soon started, which effectually shut out the cold blasts of wind and snow, and the two men prepared to pass the night as comfortably as possible. The peddler drew from his pocket a handful of money, and, after counting it, slipped it into a money-belt which he wore about his waist. He made no effort to conceal the fact that the belt was heavy with gold, and talked as simply and unsuspectingly as a child of the time, soon coming, when he could forsake his pack forever, and, with the money he had saved, end his days in peace and comfort. After readjusting the belt about his waist he laid down and was soon fast asleep, his pack serving him for a pillow.

His companion, whom the sight of the gold had excited to desperation, feigned sleep, until the breathing of the peddler assured him of his complete unconsciousness. Satisfied of this, the man, his eyes glittering fiercely in the firelight, drew from his pocket a large clasp-knife, opened the blade and drove it, with devilish precision into the sleeper's heart. It was all over in a moment. The dark blood gushed from the wound in a thick stream, there was a nervous twitching of the hands, the eyelids half opened and the eyes turned inwardly, the neck stiffened and drew the head back and all was rigid and still again.

The murderer groped for the belt, and drew it out, wet and slimy with blood. He hastily poured the gold out and looked at it, and ran it through his hands. In the fascination of the gold he forgot all else, and only remembered the crime and the victim when a stream of blood trickled down from the corpse's breast, and formed in a pool where the gold lay. Then a consciousness of his position flashed upon him, and he tossed the body into the darkness in the back part of the cave, and with the bloody clasp-knife dug a hole, and buried the gold for which he had paid so terrible a price. He would not remain in the cave with his murdered friend, and he rushed out into the snow, intending to return some time and recover the fortune—for there were thousands of dollars in the peddler's hoard. The clasp knife he still retained, and with it he "blazed" trees along his path so that he might be able to find his way to the cave more easily on his return.

A month later he was lying in a hospital at Cleveland, haggard and helpless. He had been found in the snow miles away from the scene of his crime, so badly frozen that amputation of his hands and feet was performed in a desperate effort to save his life. Pitying Samaritans had cared for him, little suspecting that the object of their sympathy was a murderer. He lingered in the hospital for months, and then they told him he must die. The remembrance of the crime which he was expiating so terribly became too much for him to bear. He sent for his niece, to whom he told the story, and died. Scarcely waiting to see the maimed body of the murderer consigned to the grave, the niece and her husband hastened to Mount Nebo and made inquiries concerning the disappearance of the peddler. By means of the blazed trees which the murderer had described, they found the cave, only to discover that its walls and rock had fallen in and barred up the entrance. The husband set to work, assisted by farm hands who lived in the vicinity, to remove the rocks. After they had progressed a few feet they were startled by unearthly voices and lights that sounded and gleamed through fissures in the rocks from the darkness in the interior of the cavern. The exploring party immediately abandoned the work, and a moment later the rocks again fell in, filling up anew the space which had been excavated.

Since then many unsuccessful attempts have been made to open the cave. One was by Mr. Conrad Dittmar, who owns the premises upon which the cave is situated. He declares the place is undoubtedly haunted, and testified to having heard and seen the voices and lights which frightened the first exploring party. A party of four men, living near Mount Nebo, attempted to open the entrance, and had the temerity to camp out over night at the mouth of the cave. After dark, while sitting around their camp-fire, they distinctly saw the ghostly figure of a man standing a few feet from them. Upon being addressed the figure faded away into nothingness. The hair of one of the party became instantly perfectly white, and a day or so later he died, so they say. The survivors declare that the figure they saw corresponded exactly to the descriptions of the murdered peddler given by those who remember him. One individual who ventured to the place after dark exhibited scars and bruises for weeks afterward in proof of his story that he had been picked up bodily by unseen hands and tossed into the creek that runs along the bottom of the ravine. A "spirit medium" who visited the place said that the fortune would not be recovered for many years to come. The trees standing on the hill-side immediately around the cave are black and lifeless, and have the appearance of having been burned with fire. The story of the murder is well authenticated, and the ghost stories are implicitly believed by the residents of Mount Nebo and vicinity.

A Woman's Business Success.

New York Letter to Boston Traveller.

An immense business success has been reached by the proprietress of the largest and most respected German daily paper in New York. This lady was left a widow with six small children and a little newspaper which she desired to sell. Only $500 was the largest sum offered for it. Hoping to find a more generous purchaser later on she persuaded its editor to remain at its head for a short time, but no one wanted the little journal. Its editor was a clever writer and a judicious selecter of news, and month by month the popularity of the little sheet grew and grew, and at last, after a year or two, she relinquished the plan of parting with it at all. She married the editor, but she always kept the business of the publication under her own care, learning by each experience how to purchase paper with more intelligence, employ work people, manage money, and yet find time to watch over and direct the education of her boys and girls. After a time she became rich, fell into the habit of driving to her handsome and retired office daily at 10 o'clock to return at 3 o'clock p. m. to an elegant home, from which her accomplished daughters were happily married, and from which her honored sons went forth to homes of their own. She has erected with her earnings one of the handsomest buildings in New York. She recently gave $50,000 to an old ladies' home (German), and during all these years of prosperous toil she has never been prosecuted or oppressed by men. Indeed they have not even desired to rise in her path or stand in her way, and she has never ceased to be a lady of high breeding and sweet womanly sympathies. Der Staats Zeitung is the leading German newspaper, and Der Zeitung building is a most beautiful monument of woman's capacity to do the very best bread-winning work in the world, provided she gives her mind, heart and enthusiasm to its accomplishment. This tender mother, who must needs provide food for her young, wrought with such materials as she had within reach, and she never cried out to the world to ask if she might.

Five Days On a Sinking Brig.

From the New York Times.

The British ship Jessie Burrill, Capt. Churchill, which arrived from Lisbon yesterday, brought five survivors of the American brig Jennie Wharton, which was abandoned on the 9th inst., in latitude 36 deg. 40 m. north and longitude 70 deg. 30 m. west. The Jessie Burrill sailed from Lisbon on January 9, and met with variable weather. At 5 p. m. on February 9, a dismasted vessel, which proved to be the brig Jennie Wharton, was sighted. A boat was lowered from the ship and five exhausted men were rescued and transferred to the Jessie Burrill. The waterlogged wreck appeared about to go to pieces when she was last seen. Capt. Granger and his four men soon began to recover from the effects of the hardships which they had undergone. The Captain stated that the Jennie Wharton sailed from Wilmington, N. C., for Baltimore, with a cargo of hard pine on February 2. All went favorably until about noon on the 4th inst., when a gale from south to southwest sprang up. Soundings showed that the depth of water was about 15 fathoms, and Capt. Granger concluded that he was off the Lookout Shoals. Orders were given to furl the jib, and while working to secure this William Loos, a sailor, was struck by a heavy sea and his arm was broken close to the shoulder. At 2:30 p. m., all hands went to the pumps. The wind and sea were still increasing, while the barometer had sunk to 29.30. There were four feet of water in the hold, and the mate and three others kept constantly at the pumps, while the rest of the crew attempted to work the ship. At 6:30 the wind moderated and hauled round to westward. Hatteras was then about fifteen miles distant; but with so much water in her hold the brig could not keep up well, and fell into the trough of the sea. She gave a lurch and rolled over on her side. The sailors reached the chain plates on the side uppermost, where they lashed themselves. William Loos, the sailor who had broken his arm, was unable to lash himself securely. A heavy wave swept him from the chain plates, and he was drowned. At daybreak a look-out was set for vessels. The sufferings of the men from hunger and thirst was intense. At 10 o'clock that morning George Knowles, the steward, died from exposure, and the body was thrown overboard. Next morning, in hope of finding something to relieve the hunger and thirst which was torturing them, a search for food and water was made. Two cans of condensed milk were at last found, and this was distributed among the famished mariners. The men passed the 7th and 8th inst. looking out for vessels, but no sails hove in sight. During the night of the 8th the prospects of the crew seemed extremely gloomy. The condensed milk had given out, and the intense suffering of hunger and thirst had been renewed. The next morning it began to blow, and rain fell. A little water was then caught and eagerly drank by the thirsting men. At 5 p. m. a ship was discovered bearing down on them. The men sprang into the life-boat when it came alongside the wreck and were, with much difficulty, transferred to the decks of the ship. They express themselves as extremely grateful to Capt. Churchill, his officers and crew for the the treatment which they received on board the Jessie Burrill. The survivors will at once proceed to their homes in Baltimore. The Jennie Wharton was brigantine rigged and measured 212 tons. She was launched in 1858 at Baltimore, where her principal owner resides.

Capt. Ford, of the ship Harriet H. McGillvery, from Manilla, reports that on January 10 during a hurricane, Theodore Devine, a sailor, fell overboard from the maintop, and was drowned.

A Boss Bigamist.

Boston Special to Chicago Tribune.

Augustus Peabody, a shoemaker of Danvers, has already a reputation which threatens to eclipse that of Marvin, the Richmond polygamist. He was arraigned a day or two ago in the Salem court for unlawful cohabitation, but he has defaulted his bonds, and probably has gone to Canada. He began his career in 1863, when he married Elizabeth L. Thomas, of Topsfield. After a short term of wedded bliss he enlisted in the army, and on his arrival at the front soon deserted, but was captured, tried by court-martial and sentenced to be shot. His wife, left penniless, worked her way to Washington, and by a personal appeal to President Lincoln secured his pardon, and he returned to Middleton. He repaid his wife's devotion by knocking her down and breaking her nose, thus disfiguring her for life, and deserting her. He was next heard from at Shapleigh, Me., where he married, but soon deserted his wife No. 2. He next appeared in Windham, N. H., in 1868, under the name of William Forest. Here he made the acquaintance of Miss Susie J. Seavey, a young lady of respectability, and married her. They had three children. He then seduced a sister of his wife, who had a child by him. The Selectmen interested themselves in the matter, and issued a warrant for his arrest. They were too late, for the bird had flown. Wife No. 3 ascertained, after she had been married five years, that his name was Peabody. He next appeared at his old haunts in Middleton, and was arrested for robbing hen-roosts, convicted and sentenced to two years in the House of Correction. Before his term expired he made his escape, and afterwards appeared in Danvers, where he formed the acquaintance of a woman named Minnie Hart, who belonged to Ipswich. He obtained a marriage license from the Town Clerk, and claims that he was married by a Justice of the Peace, but no record of any marriage has ever been returned, and it is supposed that a mock marriage was made. He has lived with her in Danvers for three years, and worked at his trade as a shoemaker. Recently there was a strike at the shoe factory of Sawyer, Eaton & Sears, and Peabody went to work there as a "scab." The other workmen, who knew something of his character, swore out a warrant against him for unlawful cohabitation with his alleged wife, and the above facts have been brought out.

A Pretty Girl as a Shoemaker.

Atlanta Letter in the Savannah News.

Atlanta can boast of a genuine curiosity—a live female shoemaker—young, pretty and industrious. Having occasion to send my little nephew with a pair of boots to be mended, he surprised me on his return by remarking that "she" said so and so about the boots. I then learned for the first time that we had in our neighborhood a young girl under twenty years of age, the daughter of a shoemaker, who daily works at the trade herself, not only mending, but making in good style both boots and shoes. For several years past she has been thus engaged and has won the respect and patronage of a large circle of appreciative families.

ACROSS THE CONTINENT.

A Grand Railway Line to Connect the Pacific and Atlantic.

An Enterprise That Asks for no Government Subsidies.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON CITY, D. C. February 16, 1882.—A syndicate of capitalists and prominent railroad men has recently been formed, with present headquarters in this city, for the construction of a railroad across the northern part of Mexico between the twenty-fifth and thirtieth parallels of latitude. The concession under which this corporation was organized was granted by the Mexican Government, on the 13th day of June 1881. The charter was formed under the laws of the State of Massachusetts, and provides for a railway some twelve hundred miles in length. The main line is projected rom the harbor of Topolobampo, on the Gulf of California, to the Rio Grande River, in a northeasterly direction, passing through the States of Sinaloa, Chihuahua, and Coahuila, to Piedras Negras, opposite Eagle Pass, on the Rio Grande. A branch is projected from a point on the main line, in the State of Chihuahua, to Presidio del Norte, on the Rio Grande. Another branch is projected from the main line north to Alamos, in the State of Sonora, and south to Mazatlan, in the State of Sinaloa.

The promoters of this scheme are ex-Secretary of the Treasury, Wm. Windom, chairman of the executive committee, with ex-Senator John B. Gordon, of Georgia, John H. Rice and Ben Hill as members of that committee. Frederick O. Prince is president; U. S. Grant, Jr., vice-president; Alex. H. Anderson, secretary; Albert K. Owen, engineer, and T. E. Sickles consulting engineer. Benj. F. Butler and Wm. K. Rogers are the attorneys. Ex-Gov. John C. Brown general solicitor for the Gould system of railroads, now of St. Louis, is spoken of as the permanent president of the corporation. A party of Boston and New York capitalists is at the back of the enterprise. The deposit required by the terms of the grant has been made by the agent in Mexico, and Mr. Owne, the engineer, is now in the field with a party locating the line. The necessary capital has been guaranteed and paid in and the work of construction will commence at as early a day as practicable.

As a project this enterprise is not entirely unknown to the public, but the recent aspect it has assumed is quite new and now for the first time published. The road is known as the Texas, Topolobampo and Pacific Railroad and Telegraph Company, and will closely connect with the Texas system of railroads. By means of it St. Louis will have a direct and shorter line to the Pacific coast than by any of the other routes.

Mr. Owen examined the harbor of Topolobampo while making a railway survey in 1872, and subsequently prepared a bill providing for a railway survey by the United States Government, which was reported upon favorably by the Senate and House Committees on Pacific Railways of the Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth Congresses. The bill, however, failed, because it was never reached on the calendar, and final action was never taken upon it. It having been determined to construct the road without Government aid, the present syndicate of capitalists was formed to place the enterprise in a practicable shape.

The line of this road is parallel with no other projected lines, except such as are so far away as not be capable of becoming, in any sense, rival lines. It passes through the richest mineral country of the world, and when completed will make accessible and productive, mines of silver and gold of inestimable value. The four Mexican States intersected by the main line and branches embrace an area of 273,294 miles, all of which vast country will be tributary to this road to a greater or less extent. Besides the rich gold and silver deposits in this region, there are immense fields of coal, and an abundance of iron and copper. Vast forests and an immense area of agricultural land are also embraced within its borders.

In addition to the plan of the road as at present projected in Mexico, there is a purpose to combine with and perfect the Erlanger system of railroads in Georgia and to form a transcontinental line making an almost direct route from Brunswick, Ga., on the Atlantic coast, to Topolobampo, on the Pacific coast. The distance from ocean to ocean by this route is 1,946 miles, and the intermediate points touched by the projected line, commencing at the east, are Albany, Ga., Eufala, Montgomery, Selma, Meridian, Vicksburg, Monroe, Longview, San Antonio and Eagle Pass. The distance from St. Louis to Topolobampo harbor is 1,680 miles. The distance from St. Louis to San Francisco, by the way of Omaha and the Union Pacific, is 2,338 miles. By the Southern Pacific, via El Paso, the distance from St. Louis to San Francisco is some 400 miles less than the distance last named.

The climate of Mexico, through which this projected route passes, is generally temperate, and its high elevation above the sea counterbalances the heat of other countries in like latitude. On the plains of the plateau, between 4,000 and 5,000 feet above the level of the sea, the climate is equable and moderate, both in summer and winter. The rainy season occurs during July and August.

The harbor of Topolobampo is composed of two bays, forming a secure anchorage for ships, containing fifty-four miles of water area, with a depth of water over twelve miles square of from twenty-one to ninety feet. The two great basins composing this fine harbor are connected by the Strait of Joshua. The depth on the bar at low water is twenty-one feet, and the tide rises from four to six feet. The area of New York bay is only twelve and one-half square miles, which affords accommodation for the largest number of ships of any harbor in the world.

The site selected as the terminus of the railway is on the north side of the inner bay, and has a water front of seven and a half miles, with a width of about three miles. It is slightly elevated above the surrounding country, and has a sufficient height to insure good drainage. There is now no human habitation there, but the site is said to be unsurpassed by that of any of the large cities of the world. The inlets and harbors in the vicinity are filled with fish of all kinds, the taking of which would afford employment and profit to a large number of people, and at the same time provide suitable subsistence for the inhabitants. Besides the valuable fisheries the supply of the finest edible oysters is inexhaustible, said to be equal in size and flavor to the finest obtained from the Chesapeake. Shells of sea fish of wonderful beauty are found in the sands of the gulf. The genuine tortoise shell turtle is found on both coasts of the peninsula, and the various species of turtle known to the table of the epicure are found in many places, in great abundance. The pearl oyster is occasionally met with in sheltered inlets and the ordinary pearl is always abundant. It is reported that there are deposits of guano on several of these islets and rocks of the upper gulf, where myriads of sea-fowl congregate. Carmen island, directly across the gulf from Topolobampo harbor, is said to contain the finest and most accessible salt mine in the world. These are some of the local advantages of this proposed new city, which is destined, as some believe, to be the future metropolis of the Pacific coast.

It will be seen that the Topolobampoo line, as thus described, possesses advantages for commerce with the world unsurpassed by those of any other route yet projected or in operation. It is shorter and passes through a snowless latitude. It opens up a country not heretofore embraced within the limits of commercial traffic, of almost fabulous wealth and beauty. The harbor at Brunswick, Georgia, is large and accessible and one of the finest on the Atlantic coast. With lines of ocean steamships from the termini this route will form a connecting link between the Occident and the Orient of unequalled advantages and of immense advantage to St. Louis and the Southern States.

COMPROMISED IN COURT.

A Property-owner Sells Out to Escape a Tax-bill.

There was somewhat of an amusing scene in Judge Adams' court this morning involving the abrupt termination of a suit while witness was upon the stand. Sewer-Contractor Skrainka, instituted in a justice's court eighteen suits against Mr. J. L. Isaacs, on special tax-bills against property owners for sewer construction in the neighborhood of Jefferson avenue, south of the Gravois road. One suit was tried in a Justice's court, resulting in a judgment for $75. Mr. Isaacs appealed to the Circuit Court on two grounds—first, that the Justice had no jurisdiction in such a suit, and second that the special tax assessment exceeded the value of the property.

D. R. Haynes was placed on the stand to prove the value of the property. He thought it was worth $5 a foot.

The statement provoked criticism on the part of Mr. Skrainka, and his attorneys. "We will give $5 a foot for it at any time," observed the plaintiff, with a smile.

"I accept that right here," shouted Mr. Isaacs, creating a ripple around the court-room. Mr. Isaacs repeated his acceptance of those terms, keeping his eye fixed upon the court.

"Then that ends this matter. We will give it," re-affirmed the Skrainka party, followed by some laughter, which the court immediately suppressed. The attorneys, W. C. Marshal, Robt. E. Collins and Judge Rombauer, put their heads together to arrange for a dismissal of the appeal, when Judge Rombauer suddenly rushed to the front, saying: "Hold on! there must be some serious mistake here. The court will permit me to say that the tax bills must first be paid before those terms are accepted." "Then, gentlemen, I see you are not ready to dispose of this case, and you had better arrange the matter elsewhere and report action later in the day," quietly observed the court with a smile, and the attorneys withdrew to further discuss the matter.

THE greatest proof of the genuine merit of an article can be found in the amount of patronage it receives, and the thousands of testimonials respecting the Great German Remedy prove most conclusively that it is all that it is represented to be. Mr. T. J. Murphy, who resides at No. 61 Dabavoice street, Brooklyn, N. Y., is one of the fortunate ones. I rubbed St. Jacobs Oil all over my left leg for several days, and it cured as pretty a case of rheumatism as ever was fastened on to a man. I never had the disease before this winter. But as almost everybody else was suffering with it, I guess I had to be in the fashion. So one day I felt a nasty sort of pain creeping down my left limb, but didn't think much of it until night, when it began to make me groan. I had seen the advertisements of St. Jacobs Oil, and had heard something about it from friends. I therefore got a bottle of it and went for my left leg. I did not stint myself in the use of the Oil, but rubbed half a bottle on the first time. The first application gave me great relief, and I let up on it until the next day, when I used the remainder in the bottle. That settled it. I have not felt any rheumatic pain since. So much for that trial.

Two new cases of small-pox were reported to the health authorities this morning.

John McNevins, a ten-year-old thief, who, with his brother and several other young marauders, have been regularly stealing freight and other material from the yards of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company on Seventh and Cerre streets, was committed to the House of Refuge by Mayor Ewing this morning.

In consequence of the location of the tracks of the Union Depot Railroad Company along Twelfth street from Locust street south, the Board of Police Commissioners some time ago ordered the removal of the furniture cars which for years past used the west side of Twelfth street from Chestnut to Market for a stand. The tracks are now laid, the street has been restored to its normal condition and the furniture men are seeking a revocation of the order of removal and a restoration of their right to occupy the street as heretofore. This morning a committee, enforced by the addition of ex-City Collector Rosenblatt and their attorney, Mr. John J. McCann, waited on Mayor Ewing to solicit permission to return with their vehicles to the accustomed quarters. The Mayor has taken their request into consideration. It will doubtless be granted.

Bud Hammond's case, charged with committing a brutal assault on a little girl of thirteen years, was concluded in Squire Lynn's Court this morning, the testimony proving that the act was committed with the consent of the girl. Hammond was then arrested on a charge of keeping a house of ill-fame.

This morning while the employes of the Herald were running off their weekly paper the large hand-press toppled over and nearly seriously injured the editor and publisher, who were working at the press. Both men were thrown under the press and remained motionless till dragged out by Mr. P. O'Rielly, assistant editor. Fortunately the press only struck the men and did not fall on them. Dr. Winton, after a thorough examination, could find no injuries, and administered stimulants to quiet the nerves of the excited and thoroughly frightened men. How the press was thrown over could not be learned.

Attentive Fire Lads.

Richard Sullivan, the pipe man of engine No. 5, who was thrown from the roof of the Visitation convent on last Wednesday, is progressing as well as can be expected. His brother fire lads are paying him every attention, keeping him company at his home night and day. Yesterday Sullivan expressed a desire to have his old bed in the engine house moved to his home, and in twenty minutes the boys had him resting easily in it. They have attended their injured comrade constantly since his accident and hope for his recovery.
